Chamberlain Fails in Effort To Form New Cabinet

Prime Minister Appears Likely To Resign under Fire of His Opponents

Said To Be Willing To Step Down If Assured New National Government Representative of All Political Factions Can Be Formed; Churchill Looms As Most Likely Choice as Successor

London, May 10 (Friday) (AP) — The lobby correspondent of Reuters, British news agency, said in a review early today of the government crisis that Prime Minister Chamberlain's departure "is almost certain."

He named Lord Halifax, Winston Churchill and David Lloyd George as the three most likely names from which a new prime minister would be chosen, and added the belief that Churchill would be the most likely selection.

This commentator said it was believed that labor would serve under Churchill.

London, May 9 (AP) — Prime Minister Chamberlain was reported tonight to have failed in his first attempt to form a reconstructed cabinet under his standard to mollify a nation aroused and angry at "bungling" iin Norway.

Labor leaders refused to come into such a government, and thereby Chamberlain edged nearer to resignation.

Even as the prime minister held conferences at No. 10 Downing street to find a political solution to his troubles, the admiralty announced hard blows in vigorous new British submarine attacks on three German convoys and other ships at an unannounced location.

At least twelve torpedo hits were reported by the admiralty, with one German ship sunk and another driven ashore and destroyed by shellfire and torpedo. One convoy attacked consisted of ten ships, and six torpedoes "found their mark," the communique said.

The air ministry, a short time later, announced two German planes were shot down over the Scottish coast today.

Premier Willing To Resign

Sources reporting the labor reversal given at a forty-five minute conference with the prime minister tonight, said Chamberlain indicated his willingness to resign if he thought that would lead to formation of a new national government representative of all political factions.

Clement R. Attlee, labor party leader, and Arthur Greenwood, deputy party leader, were at the conference.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader, is understood to have adopted the same attitude.

Whether Chamberlain will make new attempt to bring the conflicting groups together under his leadership, or whether he will make way for a new prime minister, is a question which cannot be answered tonight.

Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax and First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill were also present at the conference. It is likely that a new prime minister emerges from the political crisis it will be one of these two.

In any event it appears unlikely that the shaggy-haired Welshman, David Lloyd George, will return to the office he held in the decisive years of the World war. He is reported to have declined to be considered for leadership in a second war, after fifty years of active politics.

Another thing seemed even more certain—a quickening of the war tempo and greater initiative to salve

Netherlands Cuts Off Telephones Both In and Out

Government Bans All Wire Communication for First Time

Amsterdam, May 10 (Friday) (AP) (Via Radio) — J. Reilly O'Sullivan, chief of the Amsterdam bureau of the Associated Press, said in a broadcast to the United States today that the Netherlands government for the first time had banned all incoming as well as outgoing telephonic communications with the outside world.

Press messages for the United States and other foreign countries, he said, were refused at cable and wireless offices.

In a censured radio talk carried in the United States O'Sullivan indicated these steps were in the normal process of the government's increased precautionary efforts.

The government twice previously had cut off outgoing international calls from 10 p. m. to 8 a. m. but had accepted incoming calls, O'Sullivan said. This proved ineffective, he continued, because incoming calls increased sharply.

"Tonight there seems to be a relaxation of the tension created two days ago by unexpected cancellation of army and navy leaves," O'Sullivan said, adding that the government explained this step was taken because of "increasing uncertainties of the international situation."

He said the cancellations also might have been made to test the little country's preparedness. More men were under arms, he added.

German Railways Under Orders of Army for Holidays

Civilian Traffic Will Be Operated under Pass System

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Berlin, May 9 (AP)—All German railways were reported in reliable quarters tonight to have been placed under the command of the army for the approaching Whitsuntide holidays, with special passes required on a score of heavily-traveled routes.

Civilian traffic wil be controlled rigorously under the direction of Lieut. Colonel Bork, transport chief of the German general staff.

The Whitsun (Pentecost) holidays, beginning this week-end, are observed over Europe for a week or ten days, and are a favorite time for spring travel.

Officially, the German holiday is Sunday and Monday, but schools are closed for a week and heavy civilian rail traffic as a rule sets in several days ahead.

For days the German newspapers have been urging civilians to stay off the railroads over the holidays. Placards in stations warn travelers that regular train schedules cannot be guaranteed.

Troops Always Moving

(Troops are constantly on the move in Germany, shifting from one front to another, even though the fronts may be inactive. Thus a strategic balance is preserved, morale is kept high and the men are given a varied experience with terrain and fortifications. While no official reason is offered for the Whitsun army rail control, it is logical to suppose that it may have been decided on to prevent heavy civilian holiday travel interfering with even normal troop movements.)

While the army was taking these precautions, Adolf Hitler tried to drive a wedge between Norway's government and its people.

He bid for Norwegian, and, possibly, international sympathy by offering to release Norwegian soldiers captured by the German army. This liberty is unconditional for drafted soldiers but conditional for officers and regular members of the standing army.

Mussolini Keeps Europe Guessing As To His Plans

Tell Crowd That "Only Facts" Could Break His Silence

Rome, May 9 (AP)—Premier Mussolini kept an anxious Europe guessing tonight as to Italy's intentions in the war, telling a cheering throng that "only facts" could break his silence.

By "facts," Il Duce undoubtedly meant developments—perhaps in the Balkans, perhaps elsewhere—which might force Italy off the fence of non-belligereny and bring from him a call to arms.

Three times, the crowd massed under his Palazzo Venezia galcony in celebration of army and empire day tried to draw a rallying cry Mussolini, shouting:

"Malta!"

"Tunisia!"

"The Mediterranean is ours!"

(Malta is Britain's naval base off Sicilia in the Mediterranean. Tunis is the capital of France's north African possession, Tunisia.)

Roosevelt Calls High Officials To Fix U. S. Rules of Neutrality

Washington, May 10—(Friday)—(AP)President Roosevelt called a conference for 10:30 a. m. EST today of State, Justice, naval and army experts to fix the neutrality limits for American ships in light of the German invasion of the Low Countries.

He also directed Secretary Morgenthau to take steps before the markets open in the morning to "freeze" the credits of Holland, Belgium, and Luxembourg so that the funds of these nations cannot be alienated.

The President stayed up far into the early morning hours because of the news from Europe to complete these arrangements.

At the conference of high officials, the question of Dutch and Belgian flagships now in the ports of the American republics will be considered.

Those who were called to the White House meeting were Secretary Hull, Undersecretary Welles, Attorney-General Jackson, General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

British Forces Land in Iceland as a Precaution Against German Invasion

London, May 10 (Friday) (AP) — A British force has landed in Iceland, it was announced officially today.

The announcement said the Icelandic government was given explicit guarantees that the force had been landed to ensure the security of Iceland against a German invasion.

The force will be withdrawn upon the conclusion of hostilities.

The British government made it plain it has no intention or desire to interfere with the existing administration and that it is prepared to negotiate at once with the Icelandic government an agreement on trade matters which will bring material advantages.

The foreign office issued the following announcement:

British Explanation

"Since the German seizure of Denmark it has become necessary to reckon with the possibility of a sudden German descent upon Iceland.

"It is clear that in the face of an attack on Iceland even on a very small scale the Icelandic government would be unable to prevent their country falling completely into German hands.

"His majesty's government have accordingly decided to preclude this possibility which would deprive Iceland of their independence by themselves landing a force in Iceland and this operation was carried out this morning.

"His majesty's government has given explicit guarantees to the Icelandic government that this force has been landed to ensure the security of Iceland against a German invasion and that any further measures that may have to be taken will be designed for that purpose. xxx"

Only Minor Defense

The only defense force at the disposal of the authorities of Iceland, sister kingdom of Denmark, consists of about 70 police.

Before the war Germany made a practice of sending frequent expeditions to Iceland, nominally for scientific purposes and in connection with projected air routes.

When the war broke out there was in Iceland a considerably larger number of Germans than was justified, the British said, for purely commercial considerations.

Since the war began this number has been augmented by the crews of several shipwrecked German vessels.

David Gregg McIntosh

Baltimore, May 9 (AP) — David Gregg McIntosh, Jr., 63, who served three terms as president of the Maryland State Senate, died suddenly of heart disease at his home on York road late today.

He had been ill for several months but had continued his law practice.

McIntosh, active in the Democratic party, was elected to the House of Delegates from Baltimore county in 1913, and reelected in 1916 and 1918. In 1920 he was named Senator from Baltimore county and became president of that body in 1924, holding the position for three sessions of the legislature.

In 1929 he was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor against the late Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, but later withdrew after announcing that his candidacy had not drawn the support the expected.

He was elected to the Senate again in 1930 but retired following the 1933 session.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Charlotte Rieman McIntosh, two sons, a daughter, and a sister.

Lightning Drives for Possession of Three Countries under Way

Berlin Declares Germany Was Forced To Act Because Allies Planned Occupation at Once; Fighting Is Reported in Several Sections; Germans Attacking by Land and Air; Seize Netherlands Cities

By The Associated Press

Germany announced today (Friday) that she was taking the Netherlands and Belgium under protection and was moving with all her forces to forestall an "immediate" British-French offensive through the low countries toward the rich Reich industrial region of the Ruhr.

Luxembourg also was included in the German measures.

Radio reports said her parachute troops already had landed in the Netherlands and had encountered opposition in numerous places.

At the same time United States Ambassador in Belgium, John Cudahy, informed Secretary of State Hull that Germany's land forces were concentrated on the borders of all the low countries and were expected to attack at any moment.

Cudahy said one German and one Luxembourg citizen already had been killed in preliminay fighting, and that heavy German air forces were swarming over that tiny country, in a corner bordered by Germany, Belgium and France.

A Reuter's (British news agency) dispatch said the Germans already had landed at Waalhaven.

German air planes invaded Belgium, and Brussels, the capital, turned on its air raid alarms as soldiers, in response to urgent mobilization calls, rushed to their concentration points. Military cars and motorcycles dashed through the streets.

It was reported German parachutists already had landed in the country. The Brussels airport was bombed.

Simultaneously the German air force struck at Paris and London, occasioning an air raid alarm of an hour and fourty-eight minutes in Paris, and vigorous anti-aircraft shooting by the British along the Thames estuary.

GERMANY'S ANNOUNCEMENT

The German announcement of her action was made by DNB, official German news agency, at 7:35 a. m. (1:35 a. m., E. S. T.)

The statement said the "Reich's government has submitted to the royal Belgium and royal Netherlands governments a memorandum wherein the Reich's government announced that she has evidence unequivocally proving that an English and French attack against Germany is immediately impending and that this attack toward the Ruhr will lead via Belgium and Holland.

"The Reich's government therefore ordered German troops to safeguard the neutrality of these countries with all military means of the Reich. The Reichs government addressed another memorandum to the Luxembourg government.

"The Reichs government therein established that she is reliably informed that England and France, in pursuance of their policy of expansion of war, decided to attack Germany in the near future via Dutch and Belgian territories.

"In order to ward off the impending attack, German troops received an order to safeguard the neutrality of these two countries. Since the offensive decided upon by France and England shall also include Luxembourg, the Reichs government sees itself forced to expand the military operations under way for staving off the attack also to include Luxembourg territory."

Adolf Hitler, following his favorite tactic of striking when his enemy is unprepared, chose a moment when Britain is in the midst of a cabinet crisis over the failure of her effort to block Germany's invasion of Norway, begun just one month ago yesterday, on April 9.

Third Term Group Tells FDR He Can Have Nomination

State Leaders Inform President Delegations Are Available

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, May 9 (AP)—The campaign of the third term supporters seems to have entered a new phase—state leaders are going to President Roosevelt to tell him to his face that their delegations are ready to vote for a third term.

With the chief executive victorious, by impressive majorities, in the state primaries, the idea perhaps is to impress the chief executive with the strength that he commands among the organizations which reach down into the wards and touch the individual voter.

This is not to say that a concerted and premeditated campaign of this nature has been undertaken but:

A Georgia delegation led by Gov. E. D. Rivers called at the White House yesterday to give the President the message, personally, that Georgia's twenty-four national convention votes would be cast solidly for his renomination.

A little later a group of North Carolinians was in with an invitation to come fishing in their state and, it was reported on good authority, assurances that North Carolina's convention delegation (twenty six votes) were for a third term.

Next in line was a group from Iowa asking the President's approval of a plan to instruct their delegation for Secretary Wallace. If unmentioned, it certainly must have been in the minds of all that Wallace is one of the more enthusiastic third-termers, which is taken to mean that the state's twenty-two votes are lined up for Mr. Roosevelt if he wants them.

And today the series of visitors continued. This time it was Michigan with thirty-eight convention votes. Senator Brown (D-Mich), the leader of the group, said Mr. Roosevelt was told that his state's thirty-eight convention votes were his, if he desired them.

There were other statements made, although not in the President's circular office. Senator Hill (D-Ala) predicted Mr. Roosevelt would be renominated by acclamation. Alabama's delegation is nominally pledged to Speaker Bankhead, as a favorite son, but he has made it plain that it is undertaking no anti-third term effort.

Gov. Maybank of South Carolina, here on a state mission, said the state's Democratic convention next Wednesday, would instruct its sixteen national convention delegates to vote for President Roosevelt for President and Senator Byrnes (D-SC) for Vice-President.

As to the President's reaction to the message of the Michigan group, Brown would say nothing, the attitude adopted by the groups which called on the President yesterday.

Russia Opposed to "Balkan Adventure"

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 9. (AP)—Soviet diplomatic sources said tonight that Russia has told both belligerent camps and Italy that she does not desire to see any Balkan adventure by any of them.

Soviet diplomats were reported to have conveyed the statement of Soviet position to Britain, France Germany, and Italy, while Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, possible partners in a military alliance with Russia, were informed of the step.

The action is understood to have been taken after Germany and Italian troops were concentrated near Yugoslavian frontiers and after the arrival of an Allied battle fleet at Alexandria.

It was described as designed to prevent a "fatal collision" in the Balkans between Axis and Allied Powers which would be a detriment to Soviet interests.

Furthermore, it was reported in reliable quarters here that in addition to a Yugoslav military mission which is preparing to go to Moscow, a Soviet mission already is enroute to Belgrade.

Navy Dive Bombers To Visit Morgantown

Washington, May 9. (AP)—The Navy will send dive bombers to Morgantown, W. Va., on May 18.

Representative Randolph (D-W.Va.) said he had been advised by Admiral H. R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and Commander M. B. Gardner that the flight would be under command of Lt. Commander J. V. Sisson.

Mrs. Riggs is a freshman at the university. Riggs, tackle on the football team and a junior in the College of Engineering, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Riggs, Huntington, W. Va. Both were expected to enroll again next fall.

Red Cross Officials Accused of Spreading War Scare in the U. S.

Washington, May 9 (AP)—Red Cross officials were accused today by Senator Clark (D-Mo) of joining in "an attempt to inflame the public mind with the idea that we must inevitably be drawn into a foreign war."

The cause of his outburst was a series of announcements that the Red Cross would enroll medical technologists willing to serve in the army or navy "in a national emergency."

Placing these announcements in the Senate record, Clark declared they were in the same class as remarks by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, Admiral J. K. Taussig of the navy, and "certain propagandists."

Clark, a World War veteran, told the Senate that the assistant secretary of war had been going about the country telling people it was "inevitable that we will be drawn into war."

Admiral Taussig, he said, had followed the Japanese style of naval officers "attempting to conduct foreign relations" by predicting a war with Japan.

DeWitt Smith, director of domestic operations of the Red Cross, said the organization had been enrolling nurses, anesthetists and others for possible service in the army or navy since 1912 and that the announcements referred to by Senator Clark were routine.

Negro Hunted for Attack upon Woman

Davidsonville, Md., May 9 (AP)—Fresh possemen were sent out into the woods of Anne Arundel county tonight to relieve a score of tired officers and farmers searching for an escaped negro convict who is accused of beating a twenty-two-year-old woman.

An all-day hunt brought no results, but authorities, expressing belief the man has been cornered in the woods, are centering their efforts between Davidsonville and Galesville.

The woman, mother of three children, said the negro entered her home and after throwing her to the floor, beat her and dragged her into the nearby woods.

At the Annapolis emergency hospital she identified a picture of a negro who escaped late yesterday from a road gang near Crownsville.

Her clothing torn, the hysterical woman entered the home of a neighbor about 4 p. m. yesterday and asked that police be called.

Warden J. Leroy Wright of the House of Correction said the negro had been serving a three-month sentence for assaulting and striking a woman.

Transportation Bill Virtually Killed

Washington, May 9 (AP) — The House today virtually killed, so far as this session of Congress is concerned, a general transportation bill designed, among other things, to bring water carriers under the regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commision.

By a vote of 209 to 182, the members sent the measure back to a Senate-House conference committee with instructions to re-insert provisions protecting water carriers, railroad labor and agriculture.

Majority Leader Raybun of Texas expressed doubt that the legislation would be considered before adjournment of this session of Congress.

The legislation, which came before Congress officially more than fifteen months ago, in addition to the water carriers provisions, would have streamlined the work of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and would have made dozens of changes in the ICC act intended to improve the financial condition of railroads.

State Delegate Gets Punch in the Jaw

Baltimore, May 9 (AP)—Chester G. Kosakowski, a member of the House of Delegates, took a punch in the jaw from a taxi driver early today and was knocked "cold" for six minutes, Policeman James Lennon testified in central police court.

Kosakowski said he and a friend were bowling last night and had stopped at an east Baltimore restaurant. As he backed his car into a parking space, he heard a thump and got out to investigate.

The taxi driver, James Hawk, 27, walked up and hit him, Kosakowski continued, and that's all he remembered. Hawk said the legislator had backed into his cab as he was discharging some passengers. He was sorry about punching him, the taxi driver added.

A disorderly conduct charge against the delegate was dismissed.

Hawk was fined $2.45 for disorderly conduct and $11.45 on a charge of assaulting Kosakowski.

Germans Repulsed On Western Front

Paris, May 9 (AP)—Concerted German attacks along a broad era on the extreme northern flank of the western front have been "everywhere repulsed," the French high command reported tonight.

The fighting went on throughout last night between opposing infantry. The high command's night communique indicated it took place in the fifteen mile area separating the Moselle and Nied river valleys.

In addition to the infantry fighting, the artillery of both sides spurted into action to the west of the Vosges mountains and in the region of Wissembourg, along the southern half of the front.

The attacks on the northern flank, first referred to in the morning communique as those of "several infantry patrols," were described in the night communique as "infantry actions on a large front."

Farm Training for Underprivileged Boys

Charleston, W. Va., May 9 (AP) — Actual farm training for underprivileged boys at Camp Fair Chance in Boone county will be provided this summer, Director A. W. Garnett of the Public Assistance Department announced today.

Garnett said a 200-acre farm had been leased near the camp and planting already has started.

Eleven cows, seventeen hogs and 500 baby chicks also have been purchased.

Girls among the 103 children at the camp will participate in the project by cooking and canning the products grown, Garnett said.

Deny Haakon Is Aboard Warship

Stockholm, May 9. (AP)—The Norwegian legation in a statement denied Swedish press reports that King Haakon was in danger of capture or had been saved by boarding a British warship.

The newspaper DYA Daglight Allehanda reported today that Norwegian troops in the Gudbrandsdalen exhausted their ammunition defending the Monarch, who then escaped to a British warship which took him to northern Norway.

Vinson Announces Plan To Increase Power of the Navy

Wants To Make U. S. "Dominant" in Warships and Seaplanes

Washington, May 9. (AP)—An extraordinary study of the navy's shipbuilding and aviation programs, with a view to making the United States "dominant" in warships and seaplanes, was announced tonight by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee.

Vinson disclosed that his committee would begin the special inquiry next week to determine whether navy yards and private industry had been making progress "commensurate with the appropriations of Congress."

Although Congress had not "stinted one dollar" that the navy had requested, the Georgian said, there were indications that the ship-building program was not going ahead as it should. For instance, he declared, work on the new aircraft carrier Wasp was one year behind schedule.

Vinson added that particular attention would be paid to the question whether laws like the Walsh-Healey act, governing wages and hours of workers filling government contracts, were interfering with the navy's expansion; and whether government and private shipyards should be placed on a twenty-four-hour basis to expedite the work.

The move to review the operation of present building programs coincided with the progress of legislation authorizing an additional eleven percent expansion of the fleet at an estimated cost of $655,000,000.

Unanimously, the Senate Naval Committee recommended that the Senate pass the House-approved bill authorizing construction of nineteen battle craft and twenty-one auxiliaries.

Recognizing the possibility that developments in the European war may dictate drastic changes in the design of fighting ships, the Senate committee rejected, 5 to 3, a proposal to make the nineteen new warships a permanent addition to the fleet — a proposal that would permit the navy to replace them without further permission when they wore out.

Joe Adonis Held On 3 Charges in New York City

Gangster Accused of Kidnaping, Extortion and Assault

New York, May 9 (AP)—Joe Adonis, a round-shouldered, silent little gangster to whom the authorities have attributed a long and shadowy power in the Brooklyn underworld, surrendered today, two hours after a world-wide search for him had started.

He walked into the office of Special Assistant Attorney General John Harlan Amen in Brooklyn and —with his attorney doing all the talking—made a categorical denial of the charges existing against him —kidnaping, extortion and felonious assault.

Then, he climbed into a police limousine which took him to headquarters for the usual routine of fingerprinting and photographing. He uttered no word, but merely made inquiry through gestures as to what he was to do next. A big sapphire ring sparkled on his left hand. He was booked in his real name—Joseph A. Doto. He also has gone under aliases of Arrosa and Joseph De Mio.

He is accused specifically, along with Sam Gasberg, 50, a former aide, with abducting Isadore Wapinsky, 50, in 1932, and of holding him for two days until the payment of $5,000 ransom. Wapinsky died about a month after he had been restored to his famtly—officially of heart disease, but Amen says the victim was given a beating during his confinement.

Gasberg was arrested some time ago in Los Angeles.

The exact nature of Wapinsky's association with Adonis—who was by repute the heir of gang overlordship from Johnny Torrio and Frankie Yale—has not been disclosed.

Buying of Foreign Silver Opposed in Senate 45 to 36

Washington, May 9 (AP) — Ignoring an impassioned plea by Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky, the Senate voted forty-five to thirty-six today to pass legislation terminating the administration policy of buying foreign silver.

Barkley declared that this is no time to upset world monetary conditions or give neighboring nations —Canada and Mexico — financial worries.

But a powerful coalition of Democrats and Republicans apparently agreed with Senator Townsend (R-Del), author of the bill to stop the buying, that the United States now has more silver than it needs and has paid a "fictitious price" for nearly 2,000,000,000 ounces of the white metal acquired since the 1934 silver purchase act was passed.

The Townsend bill now goes to the House. Senator Thomas (D-Okla), an outspoken opponent predicted it would die there.

Barkley's plea for defeat of the measure brought a crisp exchange with Senator Taft (R-Ohio) over gold policies of the administration.

Secretary Morgenthau has told senators that terminating the foreign purchases undoubtedly would cause world silver prices to decline.

Canada Buys Millions Of Bushels of Grain

Washington, May 9 (AP) — An American offer to cut the price of its corn to European and Canadian buyers brought a 20,000,000-bushel purchase from the United Kingdom today.

The grain will be sold under an export subsidy program inaugurated by the agriculture department in an effort to regain dwindling foreign agricultural markets and to reduce surpluses.

The transaction will be handled through private exporters and will involve grain the government has acquired under foreclosure of loans to farmers on surplus corn.

Officials said the grain will be sold to the exporters at prices which would enable them to meet prices of competitors in foreign markets. They indicated the prices would be between twenty and twenty-five cents a bushel below current domestic corn prices.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Britain's war leadership, whoever holds the helm as prime minister, is under a stern new mandate to get on with the war with Germany, or get out.

That is the net result of a fury of parliamentary debate over the Norwegian campaign that all but shook the Birmingham business man, Neville Chamberlain, out of power and yet may lead to his retirement in favor of a younger and more aggressive man. Only the ungrudging loyalty of Winston Churchill, who might have succeeded his tottering chief, saved Chamberlain from complete disaster.

Test of Leadership

Moreover, a new test of British war leadership lies ahead in Norway. Failure to clinch the Allied finger-grip at Narvik would touch off another political powder keg in London.

Churchill drew a sharp distinction between the Narvik and Trondheim operations. He virtually committed himself, as major strategist of the Chamberlain ministry or as heir-apparent to the prime ministership, to hold Narvik against onrushing German legions at all costs. His words confirm the impression that the unsuccessful attempt to capture Trondheim was a secondary consideration with the Allied strategists.

"It was our duty to do our best to help the Norwegians," Churchill said. "For that the capture of Trondheim was the best way.

"My thoughts always had been fixed on Narvik. There, it seems, is the path which may lead to some decisive achievement in the war."

In that statement Churchill seemed to reiterate what he said at the outset of the Norwegian campaign —that the Nazi invasion of Norway would prove Hitler's fatal blunder. At the time he first made that statement Allied naval forces had already struck at Narvik to pave the way for the grim siege of the meagre German garrison still holding out in that area.

Seek to Bar Ore

Churchill indicated that the major Allied purpose in Norway was to close the Narvik door to German imports of Swedish iron ore. Out of that ore, he said, would be made German "shells which will strike down the young men of France and Britain in the campaign of 1941."

Against that background, the battle at Narvik still raging takes on deep significance. Only a handful of German troops and sailors set ashore from Nazi destroyers sunk by British naval action compose the besieged garrison. Its strength is estimated at from 3,000 to 4,000 men. British, French, Polish Norwegian troops surround in unreported numbers.

Narvik and its rail or road nections to Swedish iron fiel especially important beca winter ice blocks the moven iron ore via the gulf of Bo to Germany. Nazi relief co are surging up from the Tron front toward Narvik. Accordi Berlin reports, Nazi bombers daily reported battering at investing forces at the vital

Third Term Group Tells FDR He Can Have Nomination

State Leaders Inform President Delegations Are Available

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, May 9 (AP)—The campaign of the third term supporters seems to have entered a new phase—state leaders are going to President Roosevelt to tell him to his face that their delegations are ready to vote for a third term.

With the chief executive victorious, by impressive majorities, in the state primaries, the idea perhaps is to impress the chief executive with the strength that he commands among the organizations which reach down into the wards and touch the individual voter.

This is not to say that a concerted and premeditated campaign of this nature has been undertaken but:

A Georgia delegation led by Gov. E. D. Rivers called at the White House yesterday to give the President the message, personally, that Georgia's twenty-four national convention votes would be cast solidly for his renomination.

A little later a group of North Carolinians was in with an invitation to come fishing in their state and, it was reported on good authority, assurances that North Carolina's convention delegation (twenty six votes) were for a third term.

Next in line was a group from Iowa asking the President's approval of a plan to instruct their delegation for Secretary Wallace. If unmentioned, it certainly must have been in the minds of all that Wallace is one of the more enthusiastic third-termers, which is taken to mean that the state's twenty-two votes are lined up for Mr. Roosevelt if he wants them.

And today the series of visitors continued. This time it was Michigan with thirty-eight convention votes. Senator Brown (D-Mich), the leader of the group, said Mr. Roosevelt was told that his state's thirty-eight convention votes were his, if he desired them.

There were other statements made, although not in the President's circular office. Senator Hill (D-Ala) predicted Mr. Roosevelt would be renominated by acclamation. Alabama's delegation is nominally pledged to Speaker Bankhead, as a favorite son, but he has made it plain that it is undertaking no anti-third term effort.

Gov. Maybank of South Carolina, here on a state mission, said the state's Democratic convention next Wednesday, would instruct its sixteen national convention delegates to vote for President Roosevelt for President and Senator Byrnes (D-SC) for Vice-President.

As to the President's reaction to the message of the Michigan group, Brown would say nothing, the attitude adopted by the groups which called on the President yesterday.

Russia Opposed to "Balkan Adventure"

Sofia, Bulgaria, May 9. (AP)—Soviet diplomatic sources said tonight that Russia has told both belligerent camps and Italy that she does not desire to see any Balkan adventure by any of them.

Soviet diplomats were reported to have conveyed the statement of Soviet position to Britain, France Germany, and Italy, while Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, possible partners in a military alliance with Russia, were informed of the step.

The action is understood to have been taken after Germany and Italian troops were concentrated near Yugoslavian frontiers and after the arrival of an Allied battle fleet at Alexandria.

It was described as designed to prevent a "fatal collision" in the Balkans between Axis and Allied Powers which would be a detriment to Soviet interests.

Furthermore, it was reported in reliable quarters here that in addition to a Yugoslav military mission which is preparing to go to Moscow, a Soviet mission already is enroute to Belgrade.

Red Cross Officials Accused of Spreading War Scare in the U. S.

Washington, May 9 (AP)—Red Cross officials were accused today by Senator Clark (D-Mo) of joining in "an attempt to inflame the public mind with the idea that we must inevitably be drawn into a foreign war."

The cause of his outburst was a series of announcements that the Red Cross would enroll medical technologists willing to serve in the army or navy "in a national emergency."

Placing these announcements in the Senate record, Clark declared they were in the same class as remarks by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, Admiral J. K. Taussig of the navy, and "certain propagandists."

Clark, a World War veteran, told the Senate that the assistant secretary of war had been going about the country telling people it was "inevitable that we will be drawn into war."

Admiral Taussig, he said, had followed the Japanese style of naval officers "attempting to conduct foreign relations" by predicting a war with Japan.

DeWitt Smith, director of domestic operations of the Red Cross, said the organization had been enrolling nurses, anesthetists and others for possible service in the army or navy since 1912 and that the announcements referred to by Senator Clark were routine.

Vinson Announces Plan To Increase Power of the Navy

Wants To Make U. S. "Dominant" in Warships and Seaplanes

Washington, May 9. (AP)—An extraordinary study of the navy's shipbuilding and aviation programs, with a view to making the United States "dominant" in warships and seaplanes, was announced tonight by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Naval Committee.

Vinson disclosed that his committee would begin the special inquiry next week to determine whether navy yards and private industry had been making progress "commensurate with the appropriations of Congress."

Although Congress had not "stinted one dollar" that the navy had requested, the Georgian said, there were indications that the ship-building program was not going ahead as it should. For instance, he declared, work on the new aircraft carrier Wasp was one year behind schedule.

"Easy Money" Is Not The Real Deterrent

TOTAL DEMAND AND TIME DEPOSITS in the 15,286 active banks of the United States amounted to $58,327,585,000 on June 30, 1938, according to figures of the comptroller of the currency.

Why is this immense accumulation of money not at work?

The advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board, in a report made last June and just released, offered this comment:

> "The so-called 'easy money policy' has been followed since 1929 upon the theory, as the council understands it, that 'easy money' would act as a stimulant to business and that it would cause business to borrow and impel banks to lend. It has done neither; but it has done and is doing undeniable economic injury to the whole savings class of the American people."

However great the loss to banks by reason of inability to lend, even at low interest rates, and however great the loss of savings depositors because of low interest, it cannot be said that "easy money" is a deterrent to borrowers. Something else is to blame for the failure of business to utilize cheap money.

Business does not borrow because it is overtaxed and threatened by the New Deal. It does not dare to take the chances that would be taken in normal times. It cannot be sure that taxes, interference and competition by the government will not destroy any ventures it might make. No business man in his senses is making commitments that extend far into the future. He does not even know what the dollar will be worth, to say nothing of the danger of killing taxes, tyrannical bureaucratic interference and government competition.

Urban Growth Less but Still Going Ahead

PRELIMINARY CENSUS RETURNS on a group of forty-two towns and cities, though inconclusive, contain small comfort for theorists who have been predicting for American cities a perpetual stagnation and decay.

Only five of the forty-two urban places selected as typical by the Census Bureau failed to show growth during the 1930-40 decade. For the forty-two the average rate of growth was nine per cent.

Admittedly this was in all probability a modest rate, compared to prior performance. Lacking the names of the cities concerned, a precise comparison with the 1920-30 decade is impracticable. But the country's total urban population during that decade made a growth of twenty-seven per cent, this including of course the many little places which in those boom years gained enough to win classification as urban.

If urban growth during the 1930's was less exuberant, it should surprise no one. Cities are places of commercial and industrial enterprise. A decade destined to be known as the Depression Decade naturally would not be one in which to expect them to develop luxuriantly. Under the circumstances, an average gain of nine per cent, if that becomes the final figure, would be more surprising for its size than for lack of it.

It would not do at this juncture to contend that there actually is no long-term tendency toward a slowing up of the rate of urbanization in the United States. But preliminary census returns do seem to justify the statement that this tendency, if it exists, is far less drastic than some had pictured it. Unless industrial and commercial enterprise in truth are as decadent as the New Deal at times has suggested, the typical American city doubtless can look forward to healthy growth for many a decade to come.

Some Primary and Convention Thoughts

WEST VIRGINIA has for years striven to find a satisfactory method of shortening its primary election ballots. Various plans have been suggested and some have been tried, the latest having been the exaction of fees from candidates for the privilege of entering their names. This has helped somewhat to reduce the ballots, which under the free-for-all system resulted in blanket sheets that were intolerably confusing to the voter, caused an unnecessary added expense to the state and counties, and served to defeat in a large way the elective purpose. Yet primary election this year, which falls on May 14, will have an unwieldy ballot, as the political committees and delegate choices take up large space.

One method of cutting the ballot has often been suggested and in a feeble way it has been effected, this being the reduction in the number of elective offices. But West Virginians are not so favorably disposed about the appointive plan as are some of the other states, this being due largely to the fact that the political complexion of the state frequently changes and one party does not always have a great preponderance of the registration as is the case in Maryland.

Commenting upon this problem of the long primary ballot Editor John W. Fischer, of the Parkersburg Sentinel, looks longingly at the primary system. "After a good many years of experience with the present primary system," Fischer writes, "we are convinced that the old convention plan of nominating candidates for office was superior in its achievements to the primary system. It is doubtful, however, whether we shall ever go back to the convention method because, regardless of its defects, the present primary system seems to have strong support and a large following."

Editor Fischer indulges in the philosophical reflection that a lot of reform laws often bring systems that have more defects than the laws they are intended to remedy. One of the defects of the present primary system in West Virginia, he notes, is that it requires a candidate to make an extended and expensive campaign if he hopes to get his fair share of the votes, and this prevents some of the more able citizens from participating.

One thing can be said about the convention system and it is that, despite the fact that it was sometimes manipulated, none of the party leaders ever dared to put forth as unworthy and incompetent candidates as the primary system too often brings forth for the choice of the voters. Perhaps some day in the future the remedies sought can better be obtained by a combination of the two plans in which the better features of both can be retained.

Candid Camera Work Proves Undesirable

A WIDELY READ MONTHLY MAGAZINE, given to pictures in large numbers, announces that it is dropping its department on candid camera photography with the current issue. It reports that the trend is back to the art form, in which the subject is aware of what is going on and can prepare for it. It is a development that could have been foreseen.

Skeptics have long been saying that if, as the poet pleaded, some power gave us the gift of seeing ourselves as others see us, we would be surprised. It turned out worse than that. We were appalled. Public dignitaries, once caught shoving $5 food into their mouths at banquets, have been camera shy ever since.

The candid camera school of photography has robbed many a once-thrilling countenance of its old allure. We have never felt the same about a glamor girl after a spy behind a palm had ambushed her picking her teeth with a fork or sporting freckles as large as dimes in one of those close shots.

We have to keep some illusions, and the most precious, of course, are those about ourselves. Next most important are a few about our heroes and the girls of our dreams. Let us get back, then, as fast as possible to unreality and Art, preferably the kind in which a merciful veil is hung between the sitter and the lens.

When Beautification Gets a Setback

IT'S A FINE THING to like beauty, but there is such a thing as liking it too violently. About this time you see people going out from cities into the country, breaking off great heaps of branches from flowering shrubs, and pulling up delicate blooming plants by the roots. They drag home these flowering masses, which wither in a few hours. Meanwhile, the bushes and roadsides that were adorned by this color, became devastated and barren.

Flowering plants that were once the pride and glory of a state, have often been rooted out of all locations near any well traveled road. You have to visit remote spots to find any of these plants, if there are any left. Or the bushes and plants that bear these blooms may be so crippled by frequent raiding that they rarely bloom.

War is tough on a French chamber of commerce secretary. He spends years publicizing his town's name and then, when it becomes big news, the papers call it "Somewhere in France."

Our curbstone oracle says he knows a business man who is so old-fashioned that he uses last month's design of postage stamps.

Cross Examination

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Question: You're always in trouble, aren't you?

Answer: Yes, that's right, I am.

Question: Nearly all your life, ever since you were a kid, things have been going wrong. That's right?

Marshall Maslin

Answer: Yes, but—

Question: Other kids picked on you, didn't they?

Answer: Yes, my childhood was unhappy.

Question: And when you were older, they didn't like you, either, did they?

Answer: No, they didn't.

Question: Your first wife left you, didn't she?

Answer: Yes, she was frivolous and fickle.

Question: And you didn't get along with your second wife, either?

Answer: No, she was extravagant and she nagged me. I haven't had good luck in my marriages.

Question: In fact, you've quarreled with a lot of people and you and your brother haven't spoken for years?

Answer: Yes he cheated me out of $500 and I never forgave him.

Question: You've had many jobs, haven't you?

Answer: Yes I have no trouble getting a job.

Question: But you don't keep them very long, do you.

Answer: No, I have trouble with fellows who don't play square with me and I tell them what I think of them.

Question: But it's almost always you and not the other fellow who goes out?

Answer: Sure. I'm not sticking around where I'm not wanted. . . . What's the idea of all these questions?

Question: We're getting to that now. . . . The fact is that you don't like many people and you've usually been treated badly by them?

Answer: You said it! My opinion of the human race is that you can trust few individuals. They've all got a knife out for you and you got to protect yourself at all times.

Question: But isn't it possible that the trouble is in you? Others get along in this world. They have life-long friends and they stay married and they keep their jobs and they're not always in trouble like you. Why is that?

Answer: I guess it's because they're not independent like me. I'm not taking anything off anybody and if they don't like me it's okay by me. . . . And what's more, I don't like you, either. You ask too many questions that are none of your business. Do I make myself clear?

CONCLUSION: You do. But you ought to try liking people instead of hating them. That's YOUR trouble.

French Pass Up Propaganda

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

It seems to this onlooker that the French either are being worsted in the world propaganda battle or have just called it off—probably the latter, I should think. On the air, in the newspapers and on the lecture circuits their offerings are conspicuously missing, as contrasted to the clever and continuous outgivings of the other main contenders in the current Apocalypse.

Both Germany and England steadily feed the neutrals with action pictures and close-ups of the battles. I have yet to see one identified as of French origin. The French never have been particularly good at organized propaganda, especially political propaganda, and never have cared much about it.

About ten years ago they sent a trade mission to this country, to build goodwill and dollar exchange. There was quite a fanfare about it, and a blizzard of handouts to American newspapers, but a day or two before the mission arrived, their acidulous journalist, Pertinax, landed over here a dispatch with some highly uncomplimentary observations about the predatory U. S. A. The trade mission found that this cramped its style, but they shrugged it off and let it go at that. I know of no ambitious French effort in that line since then.

Know America Better

The French seem to say "take us or leave us." One gets that distinct impression when he visits their country. Rarely do they invite a foreigner to their home. They are informed about America, better than the English or Germans, I should say. They are definitely more aware of our achievements in the arts or the theatre and they are hospitable to our cultural offerings, from "The Lovin' Rag," which boiled up in a Chicago honky-tonk in 1912, to the offerings of any significant American painter of today—say, Gropper or Maurice Kantor. But they don't seem eagerly interested about what we think about them.

There flourishes in France a Fifth Estate of the arts, which is neither insular nor complacent, but which is wary with the canny disillusionment of a nation which is old enough to have tried anything once. They are keenly aware of the ruthless laws of national survival. They jack up their modest empire and build their Maginot Line and look to their anti-aircraft guns, but this, to them, is a matter of cold, hard expediency and they draw from it no grand illusion of imperial destiny. They carry their rubric of world politics in one pocket and their manual of the living arts in another.

War Foreseen

I believe it was in the late and incomparable Foyot Restaurant, at the Rue de Tournon and Veaugirard, where I met M. Rolland, a distinguished elderly gentleman of the French Civil Service. He was tall, slender and erect, with a guardsman's moustache, ease and urbanity of manner, and a catholicity of mind and interests which could have nurtured only by the great encyclopedists. He had served in colonial posts, knew world politics and was keenly interested in America.

"No doubt we shall have to fight the Germans again," he said. "When the time comes we shall be ready and we shall not need to whip ourselves into a frenzy of patriotism. When Napoleon divided the land, he planted us firmly here and our roots run deep. We have made a national culture and we believe that it makes for unity and safety in a nation.

"Consider the historic cuisine of this restaurant. It may seem fantastic to relate that in any way to national survival, but it is one of a multitude of small tributaries to the deeper flow of the national life, and in their entirety I believe they constitute our soundest defense.

Believer Fights Best

"Organized mendacity has had its uses in the affairs of nation, as Machiavelli so clearly shows, but he fights best who knows what he is fighting for and believes in it. That, monsieur, is why we are not aloofly complacent, but rather calmly assured."

M. Rolland, whose discourse I inadequately report, seemed utterly convincing. His words now come to the test. Has any true civilization any ramparts of defense not measurable in gun power and air squadrons?—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Attitude of Neutral Nations Makes Offensive in War Difficult for Allies

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 9—What this column today attempts is merely a summary of judgments about the European war, held by exceptionally well informed persons in Washington. They do not all agree. Few of them have fixed opinions. What is here set down is the net of several judgments.

Mark Sullivan

The phrase "lose the war," has a wide range of definitions. Ultimate "losing the war" would be complete surrender by the loser, complete ability of the winner to do what he wills with the vanquished. Quite possibly the war's end may take some form short of this ultimate completeness.

Hardly any well informed person believes the Allies will lose the war in the ultimate sense of, for example, Britain saying to Germany, "We surrender, do what you will." Hardly any one envisages a condition in which a German force invades and conquers England As between two theoretical ultimate outcomes—a German force invading England, and an Allied force invading Germany—the latter is the more possible, (though the actual outcome may take neither of these forms).

Britain Stronger at Sea

Complete surrender by the Allies would include one of two fates for the British navy. Either the navy would have been already sunk or made impotent, or else the Navy would be turned over to Germany as an incident of surrender. Such a fate for the British navy is not now foreseen by any thoughtful person. And so long as the British navy remains intact, Britain does not need to surrender in the complete sense. The navy has not been materially impaired by the war so far. The superiority of Britain's navy over the German, is greater today than at the beginning of the war, for the German navy has suffered material loss. Also, as respects mercantile ships, Britain has greater tonnage today than when the war began, due in part to her present possession of some ships formerly belonging to Norway and Denmark. England is still able, comfortably, to import the food and other essential materials she needs.

The navy is not only Britain's supreme defense. It is also her principal weapon of offense, in the sense that the navy makes possible the blockade of Germany.

About the ultimate effect of the blockade, there is difference of opinion. Necessarily so, because efficacy of the blockade is dependent upon other developments, including the action of the Balkan states, Italy and Russia. Some good judgment, though not all, says the blockade will win. This judgment includes and is based upon an assumption that the relation between Germany and Russia will not turn out in such a way as to permit Germany to have unlimited access to supplies from Russia.

Time Works for Allies

This brings us to air-power. It is mainly by air-power that Germany hopes to overpower the British Navy, or otherwise compel Britain to surrender. In air-power, when the war began, Germany was greatly superior. She is still superior. But time works for the Allies—time, and another factor. The Allies have practically unlimited access to planes made in America, in addition to what they make themselves. In time, the supply of planes from America will be greater than Germany can match. The date when the Allies can have superiority in the air may be longer deferred than is now supposed. It takes time for American factories to develop quantity production, time to ship the planes to Britain and France, time to train pilots. But, given time, Allied superiority in the air seems probable.

The largest handicap of the Allies is their unwillingness to be ruthless, while the Nazis scruple at nothing that will serve their purpose. An illustration is Norway. Three months ago, when Finland was still fighting, the Allies were willing to help her. But to help Finland it was necessary for the Allies to cross Norway. This the Allies would not do without Norway's consent. Norway was so insistent upon her neutrality that she would not let an Allied soldier set foot on her soil, even to pass across to Finland.

No Consent Asked

Germany, on the other hand, asked no consent. Germany descended upon Norway, suddenly, violently. At that point Norway cried out to the Allies for help. Fearing Germany, but not willing to be protected in advance, Norway was only willing to be rescued after it was too late.

The situation of Norway is duplicated all over Europe. Along the western front, and in the Balkans, small neutrals lie between the nations at war. All fear that Germany will seize them, in order to attack the Allies. But none seriously fear the Allies will invade them in order to attack Germany.

This attitude of the neutrals makes it difficult for the Allies to take the offensive, except on the short western front, where German and Allied territory actually meet. On the other hand, Germany can take the offensive by invading Holland or Belgium or Switzerland, or any of several Balkan countries.

This advantage of offensive is great. This war involves intricate co-operation of many factors. It involves speed, "blitzkreg". This can be accomplished by the side taking the offensive choosing any of several spots for it, and planning it for months in advance. It is less possible to the side which must take the defensive, and cannot mobilize its defense until after the blow of offense has fallen.

Health in Hard Times

Any Change in System of Caring for Sick Should Prove Worth, Magazine Says

Persistent efforts continue in Washington to change radically the whole system of caring for the sick, as we have always known it. The broad purpose is nothing less than the shifting of responsibility from its three-fold traditional base—the individual, the medical profession and the local community—to the federal and state governments.

Before that change is effected, Americans want to know what they would gain by it and what they would lose. The burden of proof is on the proponents of political medicine.

The fact is that health has never before in the history of the nation been so good as it is right now. The average expectancy of life is the greatest ever enjoyed by any great people since the fabled Methuselah Between 1900 and 1937 it was lengthened by 12 years. The death rate has fallen in 100 years from 27 per thousand to a low point of 11.2, and compares favorably with any of the large nations of the world. The ravages of tuberculosis, typhoid, diphtheria and pneumonia are decreasing. Infant and maternal mortality rates are lower than ever before.

Public health has not been affected by the depression, says Nation's Business. In fact the improvement actually accelerated during the years following 1929. From 1930-34 the mortality from tuberculosis declined each year by approximately six per cent under the preceding year. In spite of all the inspired croaking to the contrary, the best medical authorities are agreed that malnutrition has not increased. Dr. Haven Emerson, well known public health authority, said in 1935:

> "The American child, boy or girl, before and during the school period is as tall, as heavy, as active and fit at each age as was the case prior to 1929. In many studies the children of the unemployed or otherwise temporarily dependent were better off as to growth and nutrition than previously."

Quotable Quotes

By Representative Hatton W. Summers, Democrat, of Texas

Contrary to all our philosophy of government, we have placed in one appointed personnel all three powers of government. They make the rules; they construe the rules; they enforce the rules. When one of these people goes to an ordinary private citizen, he goes to him with all the powers that a king ever had. This man has no power to resist, practically speaking, the mandate of an agent of these bureaus.

"Easy Money" Is Not The Real Deterrent

TOTAL DEMAND AND TIME DEPOSITS in the 15,286 active banks of the United States amounted to $58,327,585,000 on June 30, 1938, according to figures of the comptroller of the currency.

Why is this immense accumulation of money not at work?

The advisory council of the Federal Reserve Board, in a report made last June and just released, offered this comment:

> "The so-called 'easy money policy' has been followed since 1929 upon the theory, as the council understands it, that 'easy money' would act as a stimulant to business and that it would cause business to borrow and impel banks to lend. It has done neither; but it has done and is doing undeniable economic injury to the whole savings class of the American people."

However great the loss to banks by reason of inability to lend, even at low interest rates, and however great the loss of savings depositors because of low interest, it cannot be said that "easy money" is a deterrent to borrowers. Something else is to blame for the failure of business to utilize cheap money.

Business does not borrow because it is overtaxed and threatened by the New Deal. It does not dare to take the chances that would be taken in normal times. It cannot be sure that taxes, interference and competition by the government will not destroy any ventures it might make. No business man in his senses is making commitments that extend far into the future. He does not even know what the dollar will be worth, to say nothing of the danger of killing taxes, tyrannical bureaucratic interference and government competition.

Urban Growth Less but Still Going Ahead

PRELIMINARY CENSUS RETURNS on a group of forty-two towns and cities, though inconclusive, contain small comfort for theorists who have been predicting for American cities a perpetual stagnation and decay.

Only five of the forty-two urban places selected as typical by the Census Bureau failed to show growth during the 1930-40 decade. For the forty-two the average rate of growth was nine per cent.

Admittedly this was in all probability a modest rate, compared to prior performance. Lacking the names of the cities concerned, a precise comparison with the 1920-30 decade is impracticable. But the country's total urban population during that decade made a growth of twenty-seven per cent, this including of course the many little places which in those boom years gained enough to win classification as urban.

If urban growth during the 1930's was less exuberant, it should surprise no one. Cities are places of commercial and industrial enterprise. A decade destined to be known as the Depression Decade naturally would not be one in which to expect them to develop luxuriantly. Under the circumstances, an average gain of nine per cent, if that becomes the final figure, would be more surprising for its size than for lack of it.

It would not do at this juncture to contend that there actually is no long-term tendency toward a slowing up of the rate of urbanization in the United States. But preliminary census returns do seem to justify the statement that this tendency, if it exists, is far less drastic than some had pictured it. Unless industrial and commercial enterprise in truth are as decadent as the New Deal at times has suggested, the typical American city doubtless can look forward to healthy growth for many a decade to come.

Some Primary and Convention Thoughts

WEST VIRGINIA has for years striven to find a satisfactory method of shortening its primary election ballots. Various plans have been suggested and some have been tried, the latest having been the exaction of fees from candidates for the privilege of entering their names. This has helped somewhat to reduce the ballots, which under the free-for-all system resulted in blanket sheets that were intolerably confusing to the voter, caused an unnecessary added expense to the state and counties, and served to defeat in a large way the elective purpose. Yet primary election this year, which falls on May 14, will have an unwieldy ballot, as the political committees and delegate choices take up large space.

One method of cutting the ballot has often been suggested and in a feeble way it has been effected, this being the reduction in the number of elective offices. But West Virginians are not so favorably disposed about the appointive plan as are some of the other states, this being due largely to the fact that the political complexion of the state frequently changes and one party does not always have a great preponderance of the registration as is the case in Maryland.

Commenting upon this problem of the long primary ballot Editor John W. Fischer, of the Parkersburg Sentinel, looks longingly at the primary system. "After a good many years of experience with the present primary system," Fischer writes, "we are convinced that the old convention plan of nominating candidates for office was superior in its achievements to the primary system. It is doubtful, however, whether we shall ever go back to the convention method because, regardless of its defects, the present primary system seems to have strong support and a large following."

Editor Fischer indulges in the philosophical reflection that a lot of reform laws often bring systems that have more defects than the laws they are intended to remedy. One of the defects of the present primary system in West Virginia, he notes, is that it requires a candidate to make an extended and expensive campaign if he hopes to get his fair share of the votes, and this prevents some of the more able citizens from participating.

One thing can be said about the convention system and it is that, despite the fact that it was sometimes manipulated, none of the party leaders ever dared to put forth as unworthy and incompetent candidates as the primary system too often brings forth for the choice of the voters. Perhaps some day in the future the remedies sought can better be obtained by a combination of the two plans in which the better features of both can be retained.

Candid Camera Work Proves Undesirable

A WIDELY READ MONTHLY MAGAZINE, given to pictures in large numbers, announces that it is dropping its department on candid camera photography with the current issue. It reports that the trend is back to the art form, in which the subject is aware of what is going on and can prepare for it. It is a development that could have been foreseen.

Skeptics have long been saying that if, as the poet pleaded, some power gave us the gift of seeing ourselves as others see us, we would be surprised. It turned out worse than that. We were appalled. Public dignitaries, once caught shoving $5 food into their mouths at banquets, have been camera shy ever since.

The candid camera school of photography has robbed many a once-thrilling countenance of its old allure. We have never felt the same about a glamor girl after a spy behind a palm had ambushed her picking her teeth with a fork or sporting freckles as large as dimes in one of those close shots.

We have to keep some illusions, and the most precious, of course, are those about ourselves. Next most important are a few about our heroes and the girls of our dreams. Let us get back, then, as fast as possible to unreality and Art, preferably the kind in which a merciful veil is hung between the sitter and the lens.

When Beautification Gets a Setback

IT'S A FINE THING to like beauty, but there is such a thing as liking it too violently. About this time you see people going out from cities into the country, breaking off great heaps of branches from flowering shrubs, and pulling up delicate blooming plants by the roots. They drag home these flowering masses, which wither in a few hours. Meanwhile, the bushes and roadsides that were adorned by this color, became devastated and barren.

Flowering plants that were once the pride and glory of a state, have often been rooted out of all locations near any well traveled road. You have to visit remote spots to find any of these plants, if there are any left. Or the bushes and plants that bear these blooms may be so crippled by frequent raiding that they rarely bloom.

War is tough on a French chamber of commerce secretary. He spends years publicizing his town's name and then, when it becomes big news, the papers call it "Somewhere in France."

Our curbstone oracle says he knows a business man who is so old-fashioned that he uses last month's design of postage stamps.

Cross Examination

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Question: You're always in trouble, aren't you?

Answer: Yes, that's right, I am.

Question: Nearly all your life, ever since you were a kid, things have been going wrong. That's right?

Marshall Maslin

Answer: Yes, but—

Question: Other kids picked on you, didn't they?

Answer: Yes, my childhood was unhappy.

Question: And when you were older, they didn't like you, either, did they?

Answer: No, they didn't.

Question: Your first wife left you, didn't she?

Answer: Yes, she was frivolous and fickle.

Question: And you didn't get along with your second wife, either?

Answer: No, she was extravagant and she nagged me. I haven't had good luck in my marriages.

Question: In fact, you've quarreled with a lot of people and you and your brother haven't spoken for years?

Answer: Yes he cheated me out of $500 and I never forgave him.

Question: You've had many jobs, haven't you?

Answer: Yes I have no trouble getting a job.

Question: But you don't keep them very long, do you.

Answer: No, I have trouble with fellows who don't play square with me and I tell them what I think of them.

Question: But it's almost always you and not the other fellow who goes out?

Answer: Sure. I'm not sticking around where I'm not wanted. . . . What's the idea of all these questions?

Question: We're getting to that now. . . . The fact is that you don't like many people and you've usually been treated badly by them?

Answer: You said it! My opinion of the human race is that you can trust few individuals. They've all got a knife out for you and you got to protect yourself at all times.

Question: But isn't it possible that the trouble is in you? Others get along in this world. They have life-long friends and they stay married and they keep their jobs and they're not always in trouble like you. Why is that?

Answer: I guess it's because they're not independent like me. I'm not taking anything off anybody and if they don't like me it's okay by me. . . . And what's more, I don't like you, either. You ask too many questions that are none of your business. Do I make myself clear?

CONCLUSION: You do. But you ought to try liking people instead of hating them. That's YOUR trouble

French Pass Up Propaganda

By EDWIN C. HILL

It seems to this onlooker that the French either are being worsted in the world propaganda battle or have just called it off—probably the latter, I should think. On the air, in the newspapers and on the lecture circuits their offerings are conspicuously missing, as contrasted to the clever and continuous outgivings of the other main contenders in the current Apocalypse.

Edwin C. Hill

Both Germany and England steadily feed the neutrals with action pictures and close-ups of the battles. I have yet to see one identified as of French origin. The French never have been particularly good at organized propaganda, especially political propaganda, and never have cared much about it.

About ten years ago they sent a trade mission to this country, to build goodwill and dollar exchange. There was quite a fanfare about it, and a blizzard of handouts to American newspapers, but a day or two before the mission arrived, their acidulous journalist, Pertinax, landed over here a dispatch with some highly uncomplimentary observations about the predatory U. S. A. The trade mission found that this cramped its style, but they shrugged it off and let it go at that. I know of no ambitious French effort in that line since then.

Know America Better

The French seem to say "take us or leave us." One gets that distinct impression when he visits their country. Rarely do they invite a foreigner to their home. They are informed about America better than the English or Germans, I should say. They are definitely more aware of our achievements in the arts or the theatre and they are hospitable to our cultural offerings, from "The Lovin' Rag," which boiled up in a Chicago honky-tonk in 1912, to the offerings of any significant American painter of today—say, Gropper or Maurice Kantor. But they don't seem eagerly interested about what we think about them.

There flourishes in France a Fifth Estate of the arts, which is neither insular nor complacent, but which is wary with the canny disillusionment of a nation which is old enough to have tried anything once. They are keenly aware of the ruthless laws of national survival. They jack up their modest empire and build their Maginot Line and look to their anti-aircraft guns, but this, to them, is a matter of cold, hard expediency and they draw from it no grand illusion of imperial destiny. They carry their rubric of world politics in one pocket and their manual of the living arts in another.

War Foreseen

I believe it was in the late and incomparable Foyot Restaurant, at the Rue de Tournon and Veaugirard, where I met M. Rolland, a distinguished elderly gentleman of the French Civil Service. He was tall, slender and erect, with a guardsman's moustache, ease and urbanity of manner, and a catholicity of mind and interests which could have nurtured only by the great encyclopedists. He had served in colonial posts, knew world politics and was keenly interested in America.

"No doubt we shall have to fight the Germans again," he said. "When the time comes we shall be ready and we shall not need to whip ourselves into a frenzy of patriotism. When Napoleon divided the land, he planted us firmly here and our roots run deep. We have made a national culture and we believe that it makes for unity and safety in a nation.

"Consider the historic cuisine of this restaurant. It may seem fantastic to relate that in any way to national survival, but it is one of a multitude of small tributaries to the deeper flow of the national life, and in their entirety I believe they constitute our soundest defense.

Believer Fights Best

"Organized mendacity has had its uses in the affairs of nation, as Machiavelli so clearly shows, but he fights best who knows what he is fighting for and believes in it. That, monsieur, is why we are not aloofly complacent, but rather calmly assured."

M. Rolland, whose discourse I inadequately report, seemed utterly convincing. His words now come to the test. Has any true civilization any ramparts of defense not measurable in gun power and air squadrons?—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Attitude of Neutral Nations Makes Offensive in War Difficult for Allies

By MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, May 9—What this column today attempts is merely a summary of judgments about the European war, held by exceptionally well informed persons in Washington. They do not all agree. Few of them have fixed opinions. What is here set down is the net of several judgments.

Mark Sullivan

The phrase "lose the war," has a wide range of definitions. Ultimate "losing the war" would be complete surrender by the loser, complete ability of the winner to do what he wills with the vanquished. Quite possibly the war's end may take some form short of this ultimate completeness.

Hardly any well informed person believes the Allies will lose the war in the ultimate sense of, for example, Britain saying to Germany, "We surrender, do what you will." Hardly any one envisages a condition in which a German force invades and conquers England As between two theoretical ultimate outcomes—a German force invading England, and an Allied force invading Germany—the latter is the more possible, (though the actual outcome may take neither of these forms).

Britain Stronger at Sea

Complete surrender by the Allies would include one of two fates for the British navy. Either the navy would have been already sunk or made impotent, or else the Navy would be turned over to Germany as an incident of surrender. Such a fate for the British navy is not now foreseen by any thoughtful person. And so long as the British navy remains intact, Britain does not need to surrender in the complete sense. The navy has not been materially impaired by the war so far. The superiority of Britain's navy over the German, is greater today than at the beginning of the war, for the German navy has suffered material loss. Also, as respects mercantile ships, Britain has greater tonnage today than when the war began, due in part to her present possession of some ships formerly belonging to Norway and Denmark. England is still able, comfortably, to import the food and other essential materials she needs.

The navy is not only Britain's supreme defense. It is also her principal weapon of offense, in the sense that the navy makes possible the blockade of Germany.

About the ultimate effect of the blockade, there is difference of opinion. Necessarily so, because efficacy of the blockade is dependent upon other developments, including the action of the Balkan states, Italy and Russia. Some good judgment, though not all, says the blockade will win. This judgment includes and is based upon an assumption that the relation between Germany and Russia will not turn out in such a way as to permit Germany to have unlimited access to supplies from Russia.

Time Works for Allies

This brings us to air-power. It is mainly by air-power that Germany hopes to overpower the British Navy, or otherwise compel Britain to surrender. In air-power, when the war began, Germany was greatly superior. She is still superior. But time works for the Allies—time, and another factor. The Allies have practically unlimited access to planes made in America, in addition to what they make themselves. In time, the supply of planes from America will be greater than Germany can match. The date when the Allies can have superiority in the air may be longer deferred than is now supposed. It takes time for American factories to develop quantity production, time to ship the planes to Britain and France, time to train pilots. But, given time, Allied superiority in the air seems probable.

The largest handicap of the Allies is their unwillingness to be ruthless, while the Nazis scruple at nothing that will serve their purpose. An illustration is Norway. Three months ago, when Finland was still fighting, the Allies were willing to help her. But to help Finland it was necessary for the Allies to cross Norway. This the Allies would not do without Norway's consent. Norway was so insistent upon her neutrality that she would not let an Allied soldier set foot on her soil, even to pass across to Finland.

No Consent Asked

Germany, on the other hand, asked no consent. Germany descended upon Norway, suddenly, violently. At that point Norway cried out to the Allies for help. Fearing Germany, but not willing to be protected in advance, Norway was only willing to be rescued after it was too late.

The situation of Norway is duplicated all over Europe. Along the western front, and in the Balkans, small neutrals lie between the nations at war. All fear that Germany will seize them, in order to attack the Allies. But none seriously fear the Allies will invade them in order to attack Germany.

This attitude of the neutrals makes it difficult for the Allies to take the offensive, except on the short western front, where German and Allied territory actually meet. On the other hand, Germany can take the offensive by invading Holland or Belgium or Switzerland, or any of several Balkan countries.

This advantage of offensive is great. This war involves intricate co-operation of many factors. It involves speed, "blitzkreg". This can be accomplished by the side taking the offensive choosing any of several spots for it, and planning it for months in advance. It is less possible to the side which must take the defensive, and cannot mobilize its defense until after the blow of offense has fallen.

Health in Hard Times

Any Change in System of Caring for Sick Should Prove Worth, Magazine Says

Persistent efforts continue in Washington to change radically the whole system of caring for the sick, as we have always known it. The death rate has fallen in 100 years from 27 per thousand to a low point of 11.2, and compares favorably with any of the large nations of the world. The ravages of tuberculosis, typhoid, diphtheria and pneumonia are decreasing. Infant and maternal mortality rates are lower than ever before.

Public health has not been affected by the depression, says Nation's Business. In fact the improvement actually accelerated during the years following 1929. From 1930-34 the mortality from tuberculosis declined each year by approximately six per cent under the preceding year. In spite of all the inspired croaking to the contrary, the best medical authorities are agreed that malnutrition has not increased. > "The American child, boy or girl, before and during the school period is as tall, as heavy, as active and fit at each age as was the case prior to 1929. In many studies the children of the unemployed or otherwise temporarily dependent were better off as to growth and nutrition than previously."

Good Spring Tonic Can Be Found at Zoo

Visits to Hippopotamus, Rhinoceros and Elephants Helpful

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In these spring days some people need tonics and some need sedatives. Middle-aged people are likely to be made more restless and discontented by spring than encouraged and vitalized. They are likely to be cantankerous and cross and they need to be soothed by contact with great forces of nature.

I agree with the prescription that was given for Mr. Pontifex in The Way of All Flesh. The doctor said him:

"I have found the Zoological Gardens of service to many of my patients. I should prescribe for Mr. Pontifex a course of the larger mammals. Don't let him think he is taking them medicinally, but let him go to their house twice a week for a fortnight, and stay with the hippopotamus, the rhinoceros, and the elephants, till they begin to bore him. I find these beasts do my patients more good than any others. The monkeys are not a wide enough class: they do not stimulate sufficiently. The larger carnivora are sympathetic. The reptiles are worse than useless, and the marsupials are not much better. Birds again, except parrots, are not very beneficial; he may look at them now and again, but with the elephants and the pig tribe generally he should mix just now as freely as possible."

Patient Found Cure

Mr. Pontifex's reaction to this advice is given as follows:

"Had the doctor been less eminent in his profession I should have doubted whether he was in earnest, but I knew him to be a man of business who would neither waste his own time nor that of his patients. As soon as we were out of the house we took a cab to Regent's park, and spent a couple of hours in sauntering around the different houses. Perhaps it was on account of what the doctor has told me, but I certainly became aware of a feeling I had never experienced before. I felt that I was receiving an influx of new life, or deriving new ways of looking at life — which is the same thing — by the process. I found the doctor quite right in his estimate of the larger mammals as the ones which on the whole were most beneficial, and observed that Ernest, who had heard nothing of what the doctor had said to me, lingered instinctively in front of them. As for the elephants, especially the baby elephant, he seemed to be drinking in large draughts of their lives to the recreation and regeneration of his own."

Now that the zoological gardens are once more open and we can observe the animals in the open air, there is ample opporunity to carry out this prescription. Our European neighbors who need it worse are denied this valuable treatment because their zoos have been closed and the dangerous animals killed for fear they would be set loose by an air raid. How ironical the cruelty of man must seem to a black panther—and how efficient.

Questions and Answers

S. A. R.: "What are the symptoms of hardening of the arteries and what precautions can be taken in regard to diet, etc., in order or arrest this condition and overcome it?"

Answer—I sincerely wish I knew what were the causes of hardening of the arteries. Some people believe that increases in the amount of salt and of meat in the diet causes this, and some believe that the excitement of high pressure modern life is the cause. I do not subscribe to either of these beliefs. I am inclined to believe the fundamental cause of the condition is hereditary. The most important thing in the way of treatment is not to worry about it and not to think too much about it. Hardening of the arteries in itself does not cause symptoms.

Beauty by Bottle

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU know that the milkman brings beauty to the back door every morning? Rich cream is grand to use when the skin is windtorn or sun-burned. It's good for the cuticle around the finger-nails. Not up to a cream made for the purpose, but it serves as an understudy.

If you find wrinkles are getting in their mean work, drink a glass of milk and cream, half and half, at the end of each meal. It will act favorably on the surface tissues of the face. If you're tired and jittery, it will do you good. Take a glass at bedtime.

The list of vitamins in milk looks like a family reunion. A is there with a lot of his relatives, so is D. B is present to chug up an appetite, aid digestion and make the world look sunnier. C is not so plentiful, but is represented.

Added to vitamins are protein, calcium, lime, phosphorus, iodine and sugar to supply the needs of your energy motors.

Too many women are criss-cross and don't know why. They're tired or undernourished. A perfect condition for inviting all manner of beauty woes, especially facial gullies and sagging tissues.

We've heard about milk baths, but we think that was a terrible waste. Probably no woman ever had them anyway. Just one of those funny yarns.

For years a save-your-feet campaign has been put on by the medical profession and pulchritude preachers who have deplored the popularity of the spiked heel that throws the body out of balance and brings a host of foot griefs. It seems now as if these efforts have not been in vain. Women are buying bigger and better shoes with heels that provide a solid foothold and real comfort.

Twinging toes make a woman grouchy, so have a bad effect upon the feminine phiz. Poor little trotters, they haven't done anything, but lug you wherever you want to go. Why not give them a break? The next time you buy shoes, have a heart.

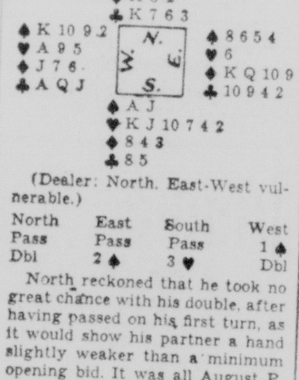
"The Authority on Authorities"

DEFEAT TO VICTORY

Who doesn't get a kick out of changing impending defeat into victory? It tastes all the sweeter when it is not expected. And how much better still, if it is more than a mere borderline triumph, with an extra trick attached, when events might have gone so that success would have been impossible.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♠

North reckoned that he took no great chance with his double, after having passed on his first turn, as it would show his partner a hand slightly weaker than a minimum opening bid. It was all August P. Jurgensen, in the South, needed to know a heart bid by him at the range of three involved no great risk. West's double, based on general principles and a size-up of his aggressive opponents, whose habits he knew well, was none too sound nevertheless.

West's greatest hard luck was in finding his partner with no spade honor, so his lead of the 10 presented declarer with a trick for the J. With a diamond lead, South could have lost two tricks in that suit, one each in the others. But his contract was safe after the spade opening, and he went to work for an extra trick. He led a heart to the A, took the heart return with the J, led to the club A, let the diamond J, covered by the Q, win, took the diamond return with the A, then built a double squeeze.

Two heart tricks, the spade A and then two more hearts did the business. As the last was played, he also had a club and a diamond, the dummy the spade Q and two clubs. West had to hold his spade K to guard the Q, so tossed away from his club Q-J, whereupon the spade Q was discarded from dummy. Now East was squeezed. If he threw the diamond 10, South's 8 would score, so he kept it and tossed a club from the 10-9. Then the club K dropped the defenders' last cards in that suit and the club 7 took the final trick.

Beauty by Bottle

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO YOU know that the milkman brings beauty to the back door every morning? Rich cream is grand to use when the skin is windtorn or sun-burned. It's good for the cuticle around the finger-nails. Not up to a cream made for the purpose, but it serves as an understudy.

If you find wrinkles are getting in their mean work, drink a glass of milk and cream, half and half, at the end of each meal. It will act favorably on the surface tissues of the face. If you're tired and jittery, it will do you good. Take a glass at bedtime.

The list of vitamins in milk looks like a family reunion. A is there with a lot of his relatives, so is D. B is present to chug up an appetite, aid digestion and make the world look sunnier. C is not so plentiful, but is represented.

Added to vitamins are protein, calcium, lime, phosphorus, iodine and sugar to supply the needs of your energy motors.

Too many women are criss-cross and don't know why. They're tired or undernourished. A perfect condition for inviting all manner of beauty woes, especially facial gullies and sagging tissues.

Cool Fashions for Very Young Misses

DUTCH BLUE seersucker overall slacks topped by a blue and white pin-striped smock make this new mode in play togs that the movies' Baby Sandy is introducing.

FIRE-ENGINE RED is the name of the color used in the slacks of this play suit combination. Red piping trims collars and cuffs of the red polka-dotted smock, three red buttons fasten it and the pockets are red apples.

POCKETS, as you may have gathered, are de riguer with young folks, too, this season. These pockets are little pink umbrellas on Baby Sandy's dainty blue flower-printed smock. They match her pink overall slacks.

The usual reason for house plants growing well but not blooming well is that they are growing in too large a pot or are kept growing too continuously. If a plant does not become pot-bound or have a rest occasionally it may keep on growing leaves and never stop to bloom.

Commercial Activity Sprouts Where Japan Invades China

AP Feature Service

After almost three years of war in China, evidence of commercial digging-in becomes increasingly noticeable. Dozens of commercial plants in Japanese-occupied sections have been taken over by the Japanese army and its commercial followers. Although photographs of them are difficult to obtain—the Japanese frown on that—Shanghai shows a good many effects of the movement. These pictures, from the Japanese-occupied sections of the city, are an indication:

HOTEL, once Chinese operated, now flies Nippon's rising sun banner. Unconfirmed reports in Shanghai say the Japanese army grabbed the hotel and turned it over to Japanese operators without reimbursing the Chinese.

CURB VENDORS—Chinese—in Shanghai's Little Tokyo are patronized by newly arrived Japanese marketing for foodstuffs.

AIRWAYS OFFICE, opened in Shanghai and serving Japanese lines operating not only throughout Japanese-occupied areas of China, but also to Japan.

Your Best Feet Forward!

By HELEN FOLLETT

FEET are having happier lives ce the low, wide heel gained at- tion. They are still a long way m enjoying a paradise of com- rt, because a lot of die-hards cling spiked heels having bases the size a dime that provide no sort of a thold.

Women who suffer from callouses, rns, ingrowing nails and all their ired ills hobble to a chiropodist's ice, have treatments, pay their s. But what good does that do? ey slip on the same shoes that ve caused these trials and trou- s, even though the operator tells em they must find booties that nform to the contour of the foot, ovide support, don't pinch or slip. If the sole of the foot is lined th lengthwise creases, they can ow that the shoe is too narrow. oes in a huddle are due to the same use; toes should have wiggling om, the cute little things.

At birth the widest part of the ot is across the toes. Shoes for ildren have the right outline. But men are out for appearance. ey should consider comfort; they n have comfort and style if they'll on a hunt for that combination. Unless the hoofers are properly od, one feels grouchy, gets back- hes, digs in wrinkles. One can't t one's best foot forward, because ey're both yowling and twinging r mercy and consideration.

Girls with long, narrow faces will ease listen to the beauty preacher nd not drag down side locks to their houlders or wear a high-up roach bove their pretty eyes. They do t that; one sees them every day. t makes the face look longer and inner.

We wish, too, that they wouldn't ear hats with crazy little steeple owns. What they need is a smart ailor, and aren't they the cute hings this spring? Get a pretty one f cerise, drape it with a black veil nd you're a honey.

Bangs are becoming to a thin ace. Side locks should be soft, not wept back severely. Consult the mirror and ponder long when planning a new coiffure.

RUTH HUSSEY . . . avoids foot ills by wearing well-fitting shoes.

Piano Wire To Help Map Aleutian Islands

Oakland, Calif. (AP)—A steel tape measure that unwinds as far as 140 miles will be used by the new U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey ship Explorer in a precise mapping of the Aleutian Islands this summer.

Actually, the tape is piano wire. It is anchored to some landmark and then unreeled as the vessel sails away. The amount of line let out is automatically registered, and when the measurement is completed the wire is cut off and abandoned.

West Union Couple Married 64 Years

West Union, W. Va., May 9 (AP)—Sixty-four years of married life—"and all of them happy ones"—were celebrated quietly by Mr. and Mrs. Notley Willis Thomas.

Thomas, eighty-five, operates a small grist mill, one of the few remaining in this section. He was born in 1855, one of twenty-one children, and has resided virtually all of his life in this state. Mrs. Thomas was born in 1856 near Clarksburg. Both are in good health.

Truck Crops Will Bring More Money To W. Va. Farmers

Charleston, W. Va., May 9 (AP)—In truck crops, a federal agriculturist says, is the key to fatter incomes for West Virginia farmers—all that is needed is to find a market.

Getting one looks like a tough problem to Harley M. Brewer, who declares the present setup leads around in a circle and back to nowhere.

The situation, says the United States Department of Agriculture statistician is this:

To get the market, farmers must produce enough to gain one — by a guarantee of large production; to produce enough they must have a market.

Something, or someone, must step in to correlate farm activities and bring an adjustment of the two conditions, according to Brewer. Truck crops in 1939 produced 4.7 per cent of the farmer's cash income.

"If a market could be fbund truck crops could be developed to a considerable extent," he says.

"West Virginia has a lot of small plots of ground — there is little extensive farming — which could be adapted to truck farming.

"The market situation, however, is hard to break into. Distributors — dealers — have to be assured of adequate supply. They have to make contracts for an entire season, which means they have to go to the larger distributing centers.

"Once tied up in a contract, they cannot buy small lots here and there."

Fine College Record

Huntington, W. Va., May 9 (AP) — Best scholar of the graduating class at Marshall college this June will be Sister Mary Beata Ruggle, of the St. Mary's hospital staff, Huntington.

Sister Mary's four-year record in the college of Arts and Sciences is 2.87, only .13 short of a perfect record, entitling her to the highest honor—Summa Cum Laude.

A native of Switzerland, Sister Mary was graduated from the Lyceum at Lumberg, Germany before coming to America.

The grades of other students range from 2.70 for Maxine MacKenzie of Huntington, second in the class, to 2.42 for the fifth honor student.

On April 26, 1607 333 years ago, Captain Christopher Newport left his small ship, the Sarah Constant, and first stepped on Virginia soil where he hoped to establish a colony for England. This spot now is part of the Coluonial National Historical park.

Your Best Feet Forward!

FEET are having happier lives ce the low, wide heel gained at- tion. They are still a long way om enjoying a paradise of com- rt, because a lot of die-hards cling spiked heels having bases the size a dime that provide no sort of a thold.

Women who suffer from callouses, rns, ingrowing nails and all their ired ills hobble to a chiropodist's ce, have treatments, pay their s. But what good does that do? ey slip on the same shoes that ve caused these trials and trou- s, even though the operator tells m they must find booties that nform to the contour of the foot, vide support, don't pinch or slip. If the sole of the foot is lined th lengthwise creases, they can w that the shoe is too narrow. es in a huddle are due to the same use; toes should have wiggling om, the cute little things.

At birth the widest part of the t is across the toes. Shoes for ildren have the right outline. But men are out for appearance. ey should consider comfort; they have comfort and style if they'll on a hunt for that combination. Unless the hoofers are properly od, one feels grouchy, gets back- hes, digs in wrinkles. One can't t one's best foot forward, because ey're both yowling and twinging r mercy and consideration.

Girls with long, narrow faces will ase listen to the beauty preacher d not drag down side locks to their oulders or wear a high-up roach ove their pretty eyes. They do t that; one sees them every day. makes the face look longer and nner.

We wish, too, that they wouldn't ear hats with crazy little steeple owns. What they need is a smart lor, and aren't they the cute ings this spring? Get a pretty one cerise, drape it with a black veil d you're a honey.

Bangs are becoming to a thin ce. Side locks should be soft, not ept back severely. Consult the mirror and ponder long when plan- ning a new coiffure.

Tots Are in There Fighting

BEFORE BATTLE

With a good luck smack from the kisser of his girl friend, Joan Earle, 5, Lee Reiter, Jr., 3 (weight: 32 lbs. without gloves) was ready to go into the naval academy's junior championships at Annapolis.

AFTER BATTLE

After the smoke cleared away, there sat Rose Bloise, age 6 months, with the crown of healthiest baby at Methodist Hospital, Brooklyn. Contestants were babies born in hospital in 6-month period.

DURING BIG BATTLES

Girl Does Better Entertaining Boy Friend at Home

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Today space is at such a premium in the average home, especially where everyone works for a living, that young people have fallen into the habit of seeing their friends somewhere else.

Naturally, mother worries over Mary being whisked away in an automobile by some young man whose name she doesn't even know, and about Jane, dancing at a public dance hall or a night club which hasn't too good a reputation.

Bob, the son of the house, mother doesn't worry so much about. He's taking some other woman's daughter to just three places and, it's up to that girl's mother to do her own worrying.

Of course, modern youngsters, to keep up with the crowd, feel they must go out in automobiles and clubs to dance, but it would be well for all parties concerned if they didn't do this seven nights in a week. Occasionally they might stay home and give their parents an introduction to their girl and boy friends.

Clairvoyant Instinct

Mother may be old-fashioned, and father's neckties subdued, and he may not be up on the latest words in slang. But mother has almost a clairvoyant instinct in sizing up girls beneath their makeup, and father knows a good dependable boy when he meets one. After the introduction, and even a few words about the weather, mother and dad, if they're tactful will disappear and leave the youngsters to entertain themselves.

"Be it ever so humble," most apartments or bungalows boast convertible rooms. If the kitchen is sizable it can be transformed into something attractive with a good looking linoleum on the floor, chontz curtains at the windows, and the china closet glistening and attractive, even though its contents have come from the five-and-ten.

Dining Room Idea

But if your apartment has only a kitchenette, where "three is a crowd, you'll have to give up the idea of having even the simplest get-together in this restricted space. How about the dining-room, even granting that one member of the family has to sleep on a convertible couch, which does duty as a bed after hours? The dining-room table will be large enough too, for those electrical gadgets which make entertaining so easy: Toasters, percolators, chafing dish, will furnish a delicious after-movie meal and it's ever so much more cozy and appetizing than going to the soda counter in a drug-store.

Amazing letters come to this column from young men who say they go "steady" with girls and have never been invited to their homes. They wonder why. Is there a chained lunatic kept in the closet? Is father (or mother) such a toss pot that he can't be seen? As they write to me: "I know the family hasn't any money, but why can't I see what kind of folks she's got? I want to know what kind of a family I'm marrying into. I don't care if it's shabby, and Mom and

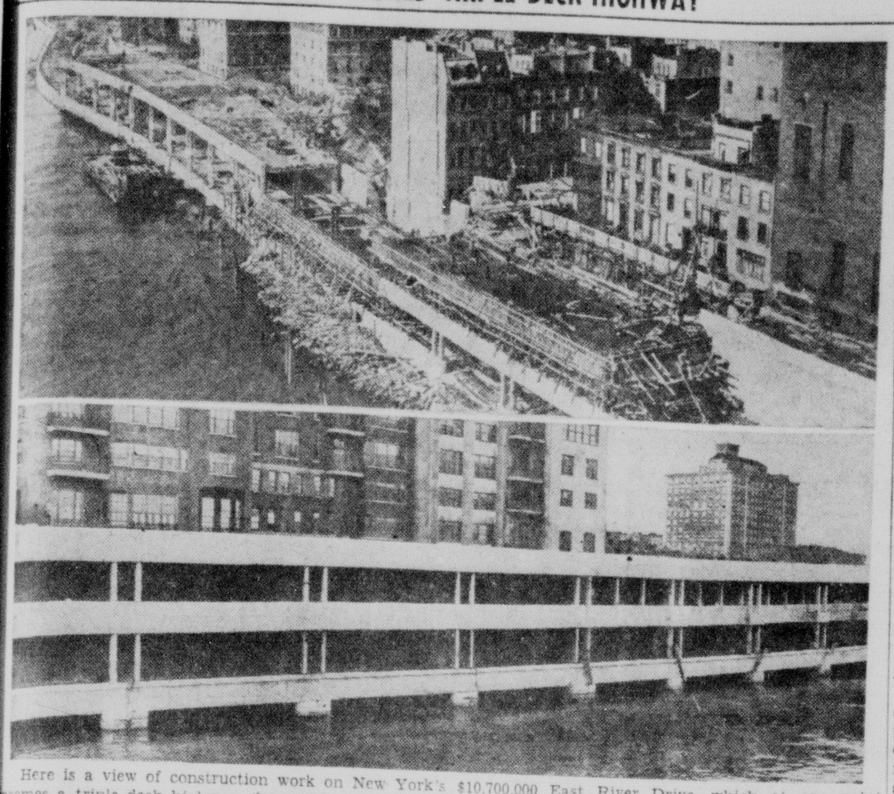
NEW YORK RUSHES TRIPLE-DECK HIGHWAY



Here is a view of construction work on New York's $10,700,000 East River Drive, which at one point becomes a triple-deck highway (lower), first project of its kind in the world. The lower lane will be for northbound express traffic, the second level for southbound, the upper level for local traffic. Work is to be completed before June 1. Thirteen men were injured recently by a cave-in.

Secret Bomb Sights Used by U. S. Army And Navy Praised

Washington, May 9 (AP)—Military authorities expressed the conviction that secret bomb sights used by United States Army and Navy planes were still the world's best in the face of Berlin reports that Nazi fliers had used in Norway a new device of comparable accuracy.

The German bomb sight was understood to be basically the same as Japanese fliers have used in China with results that have failed to impress American military airmen.

The American armed forces, by authoritative indications, have two bomb sights rather than the single device about which much secrecy has been thrown for years, one a naval development and the other perfected by a manufacturer of precision instruments.

Both are likely to remain as secret as they can be kept. The development of rival devices abroad was said authoritatively not to have altered the decision announced by President Roosevelt recently that devices rated secret by the army and navy would not be released for sale.

The bomb sights, complex mechanisms which automatically compute distance, wind resistance and other factors, have enabled army fliers to set impressive records for accuracy in practice near Langley Field, Virginia, and elsewhere. High scores have been set repeatedly in dropping actual explosives upon areas no larger than a battleship at altitudes of 18,000 feet and even higher.

The aiming mechanisms are portable and can be readily removed from planes to guarded storage places when not in use.

Germany Caulks Up Cork Leakage

Berlin (AP)—Cork now has fallen victim of stringent war economy in the Reich.

A nationwide order makes it obligatory for shop-owners selling bottled goods, such as wines, champagne, liquor, vinegar or any other bottled liquid requiring a stopper, to demand from the customer one used cork per bottle. The order was scheduled to go into effect May 15.

Restaurant proprietors were required to begin saving stoppers on May 1.

The cork thus collected will be cleansed and regenerated in factories to be used a second and perhaps many more times.

Appeals are addressed chiefly to German hausfraus, as mass consumers, to help the Fatherland by sparing it unnecessary expenditures in foreign currency. Cork is a raw material which Germany imported in large quantities.

Here Today, Gone Tomorrow

Tucson, Ariz. (AP)—Along with Villon, southwest farmers and scientists are asking, "Where are the snows of yesteryear?"

G. E. P. Smith, water engineer and University of Arizona scientist, declares "most of it was lost by sublimation."

"Such losses," he said, "are inevitable when the snowfall is followed by clear weather, cool or moderate, with normal or high winds."

To those who scoff at the problem of sublimation, Smith recalled "seeing wet clothes freeze dry on the line, and seeing a mist-like fog rising just above a snowy hillside."

Smith, who insists that forecasts of the snows of yesteryear must be made each April and September in the Southwest to aid farmers to determine how many acres to plant, believes that a study of what became of the water supply should be made included in the forecasts.

WAKLEY — Margaret Helene, aged 22, wife of Isaac J. Weakley, Ridgeley, died Thursday, May 9, at Memorial Hospital. The body was removed to the home of her brother-in-law, Leonard Boone, 219 Humbird Street, where friends will be received, and where services will be held Saturday, at 2 p. m. Interment in Mt. In Memoriams

In loving memory of Mrs. Ada Beall, who died two years ago, May 9, 1938:

I cannot say and I will not say,
That she is dead, she is just away.
With a link of her faring on as dear,
And the love of there as the love of here;
And a link of her still as the same, I say:
She is not dead, she is just away.

Sadly missed by her son and sister,
CARL SMITH & MRS. ANNA CESSNA.

Card of Thanks

We wish to take this means and opportunity to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to the very many friends and relatives who were so very kind and helpful during the sickness and following the death of our beloved daughter and sister Margaret L. Males, who died April 1. We also wish to thank all those who sent floral tributes and donated the loan of cars for the funeral and for the many other services rendered.

Small Force of Nazis Surrounded By Allied Troops

Germans Near Narvik Reported in Precarious Position

Stockholm, May 9 (AP)—A small, grim force of Germans, with airplanes as its only means of supply, was reported in dispatches from the northern Swedish border tonight to be hanging to its positions about Narvik while British, French and Norwegians drew their encircling lines tighter.

German warplanes patrol the rugged mountainsides all but a few hours of the day bombing and strafing Allied patrols and gun positions and attacking Allied ships.

Planes Land Troops

The planes have succeeded in alighting on one glacier-lake mountain top near Narvik, according to one report, and in landing parachute troop reinforcements northeast of the port for an attack on the Allies' rear.

French Alpine chasseurs, working against terrific handicaps, are worming their way into advantageous positions up steep mountainsides, hauling their guns after them and trying to take cover when the German planes come over. Their job is to gain points from which they can shell out the German machine-gun nests.

In this arctic war scene, amidst recurring snow storms, the Germans' chances of holding on are diminishing, experienced observers say.

Germans Encircled

To the north of the snow-covered mountain, penetrated by tunnels through which Swedish ore trains once rolled down hill to Narvik port, the Germans are said to be well encircled.

Meanwhile, the attempt of the Germans to reinforce their Narvik garrison of 3,000 to 4,000 men by a tremendously difficult march overland across mountains and around rocky fjords from Trondheim, 400 miles south, was reported stalled after moving 150 miles.

Howard C. Hopson Under Indictment

New York, May 9 (AP) — Howard C. Hopson, master financier who ran an investment of a few thousand dollars up to control of a billion dollar utility empire, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of taking illegal profits of more than $20,000,000.

Indicted with him were two lawyers and a former investment banker for his now bankrupt Associated Gas and Electric System, charged with assisting him in his operations. The indictment accuses the four men of fraudulent use of the mails on eighteen counts, and of conspiracy.

Prosecutors said this was the first time lawyers and bankers charged with having prepared the set up for a "gigantic mail fraud" had ever been indicted along with the principal defendant.

The lawyers named are Charles M. Travis and Garrett A. Brownback, and the former banker, Frederick S. Burroughs, once with the now defunct investment firm of Harris Forbes & Co., and since 1932 an officer of Associated.

The indictment of the 58-year old Hopson, one of the most spectacular of public utility titans during the rapid growth of superpower corporations during the 20's, brings to a climax a series of conflicts with the government.

The health of the short, heavy, bald financier, whose capacity for work had become almost a legend among utility men, finally broke, and in October, 1935, it was announced he had resigned all his offices with Associated companies, while retaining his interest.

being rumored in Paris, an echo of the London crisis, and as the Whitsuntide holidays were approaching.

Almost simultaneously with Germany's move against the low countries, Britain announced she was taking under her protective custody the island of Iceland, united to Denmark by the kingship of Christian X.

Britain said her forces had landed to prevent the island's seizure by Germany. A number of Germans are reported to have infiltrated into the little country.

The British said "explicit guarantees" already had been given that the British landing force would withdraw at conclusion of the war.

Mussolini Keeps

tence brought only words that reflected caution when Il Duce made his fourth appearance on the balcony, smilingly shook his head and placed a finger on his lips.

"After my speeches, you must become accustomed also to my silence," he said. "Only facts will break it."

He had previously lauded the triumphal date of May 9, 1936, marking the declaration of the Italian empire, as "a great day in the history of our country."

While Mussolini clearly indicated that Italy's attitude remains unchanged for the present, a Swiss report that Great Britain and France had offered protection to Yugoslavia brought a warning in one Fascist newspaper that such a guarantee might mean war.

Will Protect Yugoslavia

The Bologna newspaper Resto Del Carlino said Italy and Germany would never accept a "violation" of Yugoslavia's neutrality which would be considered treason toward the Rome-Berlin axis.

Genoa shipbuilders reported Italy was rushing its naval preparations, with the "super battleship" Roma ready for launching after being built in a year and a half.

Pope Pius XII, according to Vatican circles, discussed the Yugoslav situation with Archbishop Louis Stepinac of Zagreb in a private audience. The pontiff had called the archbishops specially to the Vatican.

man people and its government," said Hitler in an order to his military commander in Norway, general Nicolaus von Falkenhorst. "King Haakon and his cabinet urged war against Germany."

He further tried to put Haakon and his cabinet on the spot by naming as one condition for according freedom to Norwegian professional soldiers that the "former Norwegian government withdraw its appeal to fight against Germany."

There was no indication as to how many captives might be involved.

Hitler's order came on a day when the high command's communique was one of the shortest in recent weeks. No major action was recorded and even the daily elucidation by DNB, the German news agency, said the "military position in Norway underwent no essential change."

Kilgore Attacks Kump on Record

Repeats Charge He Once Represented Insurance Interests

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 9. (AP)—Judge Harley M. Kilgore, renewing his criticism of former governor H. G. Kump tonight, referred to a previous charge that Kump "had represented certain" insurance interests as a lobbyist during the last session of the legislature."

"Now Kump denies this," said Kilgore, stating that he didn't represent any insurance corporations. All that he represented was insurance agents."

Kilgore said the efforts of his opponent for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate were designed "to prevent passage of a bill which would save the citizens of this state over a million dollars annually in fire insurance premiums."

The Beckley jurist referred again to statements made by others that Kump represented the Belmont Brewing Company, and said the concern was prohibited from doing business in this state until "Kump entered the picture and for a fee of $3,000 he was able to convince the tax commissioner's office that the Belmont Brewing products should be allowed to be distributed and sold in this state."

(Kump, also speaking at Clarksburg, made reference to criticism of Van A. Bittner concerning his legal service for the same concern and said he was acting upon orders of a U. S. Court in the case and his role was that of an attorney representing creditors of the brewing company in a liquidation proceeding).

Kilgore charged also that "Kump busy trying to deny that he has any statehouse support in this current campaign and that he is strictly on his own."

Kump Speaks at Clarksburg Rally

Addresses CIO Leaders Who Are Opposed to His Nomination

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 9 (AP) — Former Governor H. G. Kump, referring in an address to CIO leaders who oppose him for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate, termed as "diabolical" tonight threats to withdraw support from Democratic nominees who do not "sell themselves."

Kump, backed by the statehouse faction of the party, spoke at one political rally while another was addressed by Judge Harley M. Kilgore, who has the support of the CIO and the party's federal faction.

"Let these individuals be admonished now that there are patriotic citizens in West Virginia who will never yield to seeing their state government turned over to men who have no regard for the rights of others, and who think only of their own greed and selfish ambitions.

"Indeed, these individuals are willing even to barter the integrity of their government and the rights of all the people to satisfy their own lust for power and class domination."

Van A. Bittner, president of United Mine Workers District 17, said this week that if Kump were nominated for Senate and State Chairman R. Carl Andrews for governor, he would not vote for them nor would he ask his people to do so.

Kump said that charges of corruption and fraud in the May 14 primary "Come with poor grace from the source and the manner that they are made."

"The people of our state quickly distinguish the true from the false," he added. "They know the difference between balderdash and billingsgate upon the one hand and honest, fearless statement of facts upon the other. They are seeking the facts."

German Bombers Over the Thames

London, May 10 (Friday) (AP)—British anti-aircraft batteries went into action early today at several points on the Thames estuary when five planes, believed to be Heinkel bombers, were seen flying in an easterly direction.

Flashes of bursting shells were plainly visible to thousands of persons in townships near the river who were awakened by sounds of the guns. The planes were flying at an altitude of about 10,000 feet.

Ayer Newspaper Cup Awarded to New York Times

Selection Made for General Excellence in Typography

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP)—Award of the F. Wayland Ayer cup for excellence in newspaper typography for 1940 to the New York Times was announced today by N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc.

The award, made annually since 1931 in connection with an exhibition, was based on typography, make-up and presswork, without regard to the editorial content of the papers. All pages, including those inside, were considered by the judges. The judging was based on editions of March 19.

Three Men Killed In Plane Crash

Los Angeles, May 9 (AP)—Three men burned to death today in a plane collision over suburban Downey airport. Their ship went into a spin and crashed.

The victims were pilot Walter Quinton, Burbank; Marshall MacCarroll, Paramount newsreel cameraman, and Marshall Coombs, Vultee aircraft photographer. Coombs, Vultee aircraft photographer.

Quinton's plane smashed into a single-seat pursuit craft piloted by Vance Breese, noted test pilot. Breese was able to bring his plane to a landing. First reports said Breese was hurt in the accident, but his injuries were not believed to be serious.

Morelia, Mexico, was the birthplace of Augustin de Iturbide, who served as emperor for a few months in 1822, and also of the man who led the rebellion against him, Jose Morelos y Pavon.

Prime Minister

Britons disturbed by the failure in Norway.

2,500,000 Men Called

Before Parliament recessed today until May 21 for the Whitsuntide holiday, a proclamation in the name of King George VI made an additional 2,500,000 men liable for armed service when summoned.

The proclamation gave Britain a potential fighting manhood of 4,500,000 between the ages of 19 and 37.

The government also prepared to burst any "Trojan Horse" within Britain. It presented a bill demanding the death penalty for grave cases of espionage and announced regulations to control aliens and propaganda.

Sir John Anderson, home secretary, told the House of Commons the measures were framed carefully to halt "mischievous activities" without penalizing mere expressions of opinion.

The day's events confirmed belief that 71-year-old Chamberlain means to try one more fall with destiny and Adolf Hitler. He promised the House another debate on conduct of the war two weeks hence "if events should make it desirable."

Plans Kept Secret

For the moment, however, he left unanswered whether he intends to continue with the present ministers or bow to labor's demands and discard Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer; Sir Samuel Hoare, air minister, and, possibly, War Secretary Oliver Stanley and Supply Minister Leslie Burgin.

Veteran observers, nevertheless, decided almost unanimously tonight that Chamberlain would drop them and begin reconstruction.

He could do that smoothly by resigning himself when he sees King George and then form a new government at the King's request, leaving them out.

This course was believed to have been urged on him by Conservative back-benchers with whom he conferred today just before a meeting of the war cabinet.

Filling their places would be a harder job.

The labor party has declared it will not allow its members to serve in a government over which Chamberlain holds the whip hand.

According to veteran political observers, there are two ways out of that dilemma.

First, Attlee, Greenwood and Morrison might bolt their party for the new cabinet by pleading that "England needs us" and "this is no time for partisan grudges."

There was a possibility that such a change of sides might influence Lloyd George and Liberal opposition leader Sir Archibald Sinclair to follow the Laborites' lead.

Secondly, the labor conference may draw up terms under which it would agree to participate in the Chamberlain government.

With the conference in mind, the labor opposition docilely accepted the twelve-day parliamentary adjournment for Whitsuntide, Britain's biggest spring "bank" holiday.

An independent, Clement Davies, amended the motion for adjournment to set May 14, next Tuesday, for reassembling but withdrew his proposal on assurances that the House would be recalled early in case of an emergency. The House of Lords already had adjourned to May 21.

Clean-Up Drive Set for Week Of May 20

Jr. Association Sponsors Second Annual Campaign

Members of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce have been working for several weeks on the second annual Cumberland Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up campaign, which will be held the week of May 20 to May 25.

Committee members met last evening in the Association's offices. A number of sub-committees were selected to assist in the task of promoting greater public pride and interest in the city by encouraging individual beautification of homes, business places, industrial plants, institutions, streets, alleys, parks and other parts of the community.

Other Cities Set Example

About this time of the year, most aggressive cities sponsor some such campaign to serve as a reminder that a beautiful city is usually a healthier city, and the kind of community that attracts visitors and tourists, D. Clifford Goodfellow, chairman of the committee, explained.

In an effort to arouse greater public interest, the Junior Association plans an extensive publicity campaign, by means of the press, radio, banners, bill boards and displays. Radio talks and newspaper articles will offer constructive suggestions for enhancing the beauty of lawns, dwellings and their surroundings.

Much Can Be Done

Help hints will be available that should do much to encourage interest needed to make the city a more attractive place. Much can be done without huge expenditures of money to enhance the value and beauty of most properties, committee members believe. And it is for these reasons that the Junior Association is interested and has made this event an annual project.

Last year, the association featured the Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up campaign as its first project after being organized. There was considerable interest, and the young men plan to broaden the program a little each year until the whole community takes part.

Members of the committee who have been active in the campaign include, Chairman Goodfellow, Thomas E. Gilchrist, John Schaidt, Fred Z. Hetzel, F. Allan Weatherholt, and James A. Avirett.

Mother, 22, Dies, Baby Son Lives

Tragedy Precedes Mother's Day

If everything had gone well, the young couple would have celebrated Mother's Day with the birth of their first son.

But Fate ruled otherwise, and the young mother, only 22, made the supreme sacrifice. Her son lives.

Mrs. Margaret Weakley, wife of Isaac J. Weakley, died in childbirth early yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Also surviving, besides her husband and baby boy, are her mother, Mrs. John Reynolds, of Sandy Hook, Md.; four brothers, John W. Reynolds, of Cumberland, and James, Donald and Richard Reynolds, of Sandy Hook; and five sisters, Mrs. Francis Grimm, of Ridgeley; Mrs. Virginia Joy, of Brunswick, and Misses Josephine, Louise, and Reginia Reynolds, all of Sandy Hook.

The body was removed to the home of her brother-in-law, Leonard Boone, 219 Humbird street.

Driscoll Re-Elected By Republican Club

Members of the Sixth District Republican Club last night re-elected Fred B. Driscoll to the presidency at a meeting at Knights of Malta hall, Prospect Square.

Other officers re-elected were David Steel, treasurer, and J. Frederick Walton, secretary. New officers are George Williamson, first vice-president; Thomas L. Popp, second vice-president; and William R. Carscaden, third vice president.

The thirty-five members present unanimously endorsed the candidacies of former Governor Harry W. Nice for United States senator and Walter P. Johnson as Sixth representative.

Letters were ordered sent to the candidates informing them of the club's action.

Trucker Fined $100, Had No Insurance

A Cumberland trucker was sentenced to 110 days in the county jail yesterday on charges of failing to carry liability insurance and operating with improper license tags.

He was Raymond Lee Parker, of 111½ Fifth street, who was sent to jail in default of fines totaling $110. The insurance charge resulted in a fine of $100, the license charge, $10.

Parker, said to have been hauling fertilizer from Baltimore to Cumberland, was arrested in South Cumberland by State Trooper Carl G. Storm and tried before Trial Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr.

Rummage Sale Tonight

News Reporter Enjoys Grand College Opera

Grand opera officially comes to Frostburg tonight and a good many wives are going to make a good many husbands dust off their toppers, if they have any, and turn out for the momentous occasion.

Actually, grand opera arrived in Frostburg last night when Prof. Maurice Matteson herded a group of elementary school pupils into the gymnasium at Frostburg State Teacher's College to witness his dress rehearsal of Gounod's "Faust."

The soloists, villagers, soldiers and members of the orchestra were selected from the 220 students at the college.

"Daring Thing"

A News reporter caught up with Mr. Matteson between the first and second acts of the production. The perspiring Mr. Matteson immediately informed the reporter that putting on a grand opera was no picnic.

"It's a pretty daring thing to do," Mr. Matteson shouted after admitting that so far as he knew no other college around had ever tried it before.

Asked how many members of the student body had ever actually seen a grand opera, Mr. Matteson replied, "probably about three."

Busy Evening

However, the director had little time at the moment to fool around with reporters. He was too busy stampeding the members of the cast out of the wrong places and into the right places.

Once everything was in readiness, Mr. Matteson left the members of his cast back stage and marched out front to quell the racket being made by the youthful members of the audience. Then, marching to the podium he keenly scrutinized the various members of his orchestra, lifted his arms aloft, and off they went.

When the curtain parted, the stage was found to be chuck full of people clad in colorful costumes and without any ado they plunged into the "Soldier's Chorus" which they rendered with gusto.

It was immediately noted that some members of the cast had not spared the horses in the matter of applying the grease paint. One, in particular, looked as if he had fallen bodily into a paint pot.

(However, it is to be remembered that last night's affair was merely the dress rehearsal and not the big moment. That's tonight).

Remarkable Death Scene

The act concludes with a henchman of the Devil (John Blackwell) running a sword through Valentine (William Klipp) who is the brother of Margarita (Mary Lou Dunn.)

Valentine's death last night was without a doubt one of the most gruesome things this reporter ever witnessed. He died slowly, inch by inch, in the true grand opera manner. He writhed, grimaced, clutched his breast and finally slogged to the floor.

For a moment it looked as if it was all over but he finally revived sufficiently to sing his swan song.

For a dying man Klipp gasped out his last song in an unusually vigorous manner, which is also true to the grand opera tradition. They always do. He will die again tonight.

Faust Well Played

Faust, an aged philosopher restored to youth by the Devil, will be played tonight by David Beck, a sophomore, who spent his early days in China where his father was a missionary.

Beck makes a jaunty figure in his gay duds and plumed hat. However his slim waistline does not even faintly resemble that of any grand opera singer this reporter ever saw, with the possible exception of Jan Kipura.

Beck's gestures are magnificent. His acting is by far the most grand operish thing in the production.

Blackwell A1 Devil

John Blackwell, of Cumberland, a freshman who is considering becoming an actor according to his teachers, plays the part of Mephistopheles, The Evil Spirit. He is a sinister looking soul and makes as fine a Devil as one could desire.

Margarita, a village maiden, is played by Mary Lou Dunn, of Frostburg, a sophomore, who has by far the best voice in the cast.

Klipp, also a sophomore, of Hagerstown, also sings well in the roll of Valentine until his realistic slow death scene at the end of the second act.

Cumberland Girl Sings

Siebel, a village boy devoted to Margarita, is played by a Cumberland girl, June Lee Shade, a sophomore, who sings nicely and looks like a nice Yale boy doiled up for masquerade.

Others in the cast are Harold Messmen, of Cumberland sophomore, who plays Wagner, a student, and Louyse Eldridge, a freshman, who portrays Dame Martha, the village gossip.

The student cast, all of whom are training to become school teachers, gives the opera in two hours, although the Metropolitan version usually takes three-and-a-half. Much of the opera has been abridged and adapted for tonight's show, although all the big moments still remain intact.

Reason for It

After the dress rehearsal, Mr. Matteson, who had been a dynamo all evening, took a few minutes off to tell why he conveived the idea of presenting Faust.

"I thought it would be a good experience for them," he said. "And I think they are enjoying it, too, but I'm not. I get too excited about the thing to enjoy it much.

At this point, Mrs. Matteson, who is the capable accompanist at the piano for the production, interrupted to explain that her husband really was enjoying it all immensely.

Great Treat Offered

At any event, people who see tonight's production are in for a treat. Although few of his cast have ever seen a grand opera, Mr. Matteson has ably put the idea across to them.

It's all most enjoyable, right up to the last moment, when the Devil makes off with poor Faust and Margarita swoons.

The members of the cast take the thing in stride, although one suspects now and then that they are quietly laughing up their sleeves here and there at such grandoise goings on. Most of them don't look like opera singers. Thank Goodness.

Once the Devil had snatched Faust last night and the curtain was rung down, the members of the orchestra proceeded to indulge in a bit of a jam session. Members of the Metropolitan would probably have been taken aback by such a finale but it really sounded mighty good.

As the News reporter left the gymnasium, a number of participants in the tragedy had gathered outside and were cutting loose with a little close harmony. The song was "Down by the Old Mill Stream."

It takes more than a grand opera to faze a modern college boy or girl.

Crystals Capture Savoy Ladies' Title

The Crystals, paced by Stegmaier's 461, defeated Savoy by 47 sticks at the Savoy this week to capture the Savoy Ladies' League title for the 1939-40 season. Savoy took the second and third games but was unable to overcome the 114-pin margin gained by the Crystals in the opener.

Sluss pegged the high count in an earlier second half rolloff engagement as the Crystals downed the Majestics to earn the right to oppose Savoy. The Crystals bagged their 80-pin margin in the third game after reducing the Majestics' early lead in the second. The summary:

Fire Marshal State's Need

Gontrum Urges Funds Be Appropriated

Failure of the Maryland legislature to provide funds for the salary of a state fire marshal drew the fire of State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum here last night.

In an address before the Allegany county branch of the National Life Underwriters Association, Gontrum pointed out that the work of his office is divided into two main functions—supervision of the insurance business in Maryland and prevention of fires as well as investigation of arson cases.

After pointing out the first division is primarily the work of the state insurance commissioner and that the law provides for the appointment of a deputy insurance commissioner to act as state fire marshal, Gontrum said:

"Owing to the failure of the legislature to allow funds for the payment of a state fire marshal, I have found that it was necessary that I assume the functions of a fire marshal until such time as the legislature recognizes the importance of that office and makes provision for the payment of a full-time fire marshal."

Gontrum took occasion to praise John Meyers, of Cumberland, one of the deputy fire marshals of his office, as "an excellent man in every way."

Gontrum turned next to the supervision of insurance companies and praised the business as essential to security and happiness.

One point he emphasized in his discussion was that the state insurance department is always ready to give advice and counsel to policyholders without charge.

Another speaker at the meeting, held at Central YMCA, was Capt. Maynard C. Nicholl, of Baltimore, general agent for the New England Mutural Life Insurance Company.

President A. V. Huey presided and introduced Gontrum. L. Leslie Helmer introduced Nicholl.

Police Seize Unsafe Bikes

Have Cellar Full In Safety Drive

A lot of Cumberland youths are walking these days instead of riding bicycles.

That's the result of the annual spring drive against unsafe bicycling launched this week by the police.

Nearly a score of bicycles are stored in the basement of police headquarters — temporarily confiscated for violations of the city safety regulations.

The cellar is almost full of them, and police last night issued an appeal to the bicyclists to observe the regulations. They don't want the bicycles, but will keep grabbing them unless the cyclists behave.

The riders of the now riderless bikes are scheduled to be given hearings in Police court tomorrow, and sentences may range from confiscation of the "wheels" for a week —or six months.

Offenses listed on the docket include riding double, no license or failing to carry licenses, "fancy" riding, riding up one-way streets, ignoring traffic lights, allowing unlicenced persons to ride, and failure to carry bells or lights.

The drive was spurred by the serious injury of an eleven-year-old boy when the bicycle he was riding ran into a car on Greene street Sunday. Police pointed out that boy was riding a bicycle he had borrowed from a girl.

And the girl is one of the offenders elated to get a hearing tomorrow. She is charged with lending her bike to an unlicensed person.

(End of season)

The first campaign of the City Bowling League drew to a close this week with SS. Peter and Paul winning a pair from Embassy at Club Recreation and the championship Diamonds and Club Recreation taking matches by forfeit.

Leo Leasure with 212-499 paced the Saints while Levin was high for Embassy with 207-500. The Diamonds won three from Martin's Market and Club scored over the Cumberland Outdoor Club in forfeit contests. Neither the Marketeers or Outdoor Club could get a full team together.

The Diamonds, who copped both halves of the race, rolled for averages with P. Smith checking in 193-533. Club also scattered the sticks although it had no opposition with "Bud" Edenhart spilling 207-562 and Francis Twigg 200-521. The Diamonds rolled on their home alleys and the Club on the Savoy lanes. Schoolboy Patrolmen, 275 Strong, To Invade Washington Tomorrow

A trainload of schoolboy patrolmen, 275 strong and led by the Fort Hill band, will descend on Washington tomorrow to parade and see the sights during their ninth annual convention.

The local contingent, sponsored by the Western Maryland Motor Club, will leave here tomorrow at 5 a. m. aboard a chartered B&O train.

Since schoolboy patrolmen travel, like an army, on their stomachs, they will be supplied at the outset with a lunch kit containing sweet rolls, cup cakes and cookies, and one banana.

The patrolmen will parade in blue and white uniforms and white caps, and each will carry an 18-inch American flag. After they march, they will lunch at Thompson's restaurant. Then they will visit the public buildings and stop at Chinatown for some souvenirs, arriving back at Thompsons, of course, in time for supper.

Then they will catch the train for home, arriving here about 9 p. m.

Fifty to seventy-five parents and sixty members of the Fort Hill band will swell the ranks of the 275 patrolmen.

F. H. Rockwell, president-manager of the auto club, will be generalissimo. Assisting him will be the club directors, K. A. Wolfe, J. Walter Byer, J. L. Towler, Daniel D'Amicol, M. M. Patterson, G. Gale Townsend, Alvin B. Storey, Samuel Wolford, and Ward Hauger.

Settlement Seen In Stewart Case

Circuit Court Hearing Halted

An out-of-court settlement is scheduled to close the injunction suit filed last week by A. Charles Stewart, it was indicated yesterday as a hearing in the case was halted in Circuit court.

Stewart, Frostburg business man and former president of the board of county commissioners, had asked an injunction to prevent Arthur Mullooly and Blair V. Welsh from using or damaging a road leading to Stewart-leased mines near Mt. Savage.

The road is on property owned by Mullooly, but Stewart admittedly has a right to use it in his mining business.

Though Attorneys William A. Gunter and David W. Sloan, Stewart claimed that he had built and maintained the road for the use of his coal trucks and that heavy tractors and trucks used by Welsh in hauling logs from a timber operation had badly damaged the road.

The defendants, represented by Attorney Clarence Lippel, denied having damaged the road and also contested the right of Stewart to bar them from using it, although admitting his right to use it.

Several engineers were on hand to testify in the case, but the hearing was halted before the plaintiff's case had been completed, and an agreement between the parties appeared likely without further court proceedings.

Kimble To Address New Townsend Club

Townsend Club No. 4 will have its opening meeting at the Queen City hotel this evening at 8 o'clock. State Senator Robert R. Kimble will speak.

Three young musicians will be featured on the program. They are Ruth Lee Richards, Joan Rowe, and Lois Heishman.

Correction

Lawrence A. Fannon, elected chairman of Group 1 of the Maryland Bankers Association Wednesday night, was listed in yesterday's News as being from Oakland. Mr. Fannon is a resident of Mt. Savage.

In the town of Morelia, Mexico, is the Guadalupe church, the walls of which are covered with gold leaf. Also there is a pink stones cathedral that required 104 years to build.

'Outward Bound' Is Town Hallers' Grand Finale

Will Be Presented Monday Night To Climax Season

The Town Hall Players, Cumberland's Little Theatre Group, will climax the current season with a presentation of Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound" Monday night at St. Peter and Paul hall on Fayette street.

Director Carl A. Low Jr. decided that after reading many plays in an effort to obtain the right vehicle for a closing show, he found "Outward Bound" to be the one most suited. In fact, he goes on to say that it will probably be the best show the Town Hall Players have given to date.

The story concerns the passengers on a ship that is outward bound but exactly where no one knows. It is a ship with but one class, rich and poor alike, and with no captain or crew. The only attendant is the steward Scrubby, who tries to comfort and advise the individuals of this oddly assorted group, when they find out they are sailing for both Heaven and Hell.

The company is amusingly mixed including ne'er-do-well, an irritable business man, a cockney charwoman, etc.

And the reactions are many and varied when they all find out they are dead people approaching the Supreme Examiner. As can be imagined, these contrasting reactions combine to make an enthralling and unusual drama.

The cast includes Low, J. Hoge Smith, Jack Moore, Winnie Moore, Lois May Clerihue, Willie Conner, Bill Kight, Bob Rosamond, and Virginia Keffer.

The production is being staged by Low, with Jimmy Shaw and Bob Cramer as technical crew.

Community Chest Leaders Feted

Gunter, Mrs. Legge Honored at Dinner

Certificates of appreciation for their work in putting over the 1940 Community Chest Drive were presented last night to William A. Gunter and Mrs. George Legge at a dinner-meeting of workers at the Central Y. M. C. A.

The presentations were made by H. W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and president of the Chest, with both Mr. Gunter and Mrs. Legge giving short talks.

While last night's dinner meeting was called principally for the purpose of tossing well-deserved bouquets to the wheel horses of the drive, most of the people present seemed more concerned with planning for next year's campaign.

Suggestions for improving the yearly drive were presented and will be given consideration by Chest officials.

Three Prisoners Taken to 'Cut'

Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe yesterday transferred three prisoners to the House of Correction and returned an Army deserter to Fort Hoyle at Aberdeen.

The three taken to the "Cut" were Phillip Shaffer, who was sentenced in Juvenile court to a year for contributing to the delinquency of his minor child; Robert Tranum, six months for theft of a $9 waffle iron; and John Hier, six months for vagrancy.

The alleged deserter was Alfred L. Cannon, 25, of Bedford street, who was picked up Wednesday by City Detective-Sergeant B. F. Gaffney after three weeks of "French leave."

Death Car Driver Has Broken Back

Lewis E. Fallon, 22, of McCoole, suffered a broken back in the automobile accident in which Charles Raymond Robinson, also of McCoole, was killed Wednesday afternoon.

This was revealed yesterday by x-rays at Reeves clinic in Westernport. Only one vertebra was fractured, however, which means that young Fallon probably will not be crippled. He will have to spend some time in a cast, however.

Fallon was driving his 1929 Ford roadster from Westernport to McCoole when it overturned and threw both men out. Robinson died shortly afterwards of a fractured skull.

It was only a year ago that Robinson was riding in a car in which Frank Chucci, of Burke Hill was fatally injured. In this accident, which happened on Pattersons creek six miles from Keyser, Robinson was thrown sixty feet. He suffered a slight skull fracture then, and was in Potomac Valley hospital for two weeks.

99 out of 100--

99 out of every hundred tavern-keepers are, we feel, hard working, honest citizens. They, like their ancestors through the ages, contribute definitely to the comfort and enjoyment of their fellow men and women.

Like 99 out of 100 doctors . . . 99 out of 100 lawyers . . . 99 out of 100 merchants . . . in fact 99 out of 100 men and women in all lines . . . they deserve the protection of our laws.

The Brewing Industry in Maryland is calling your attention to excellent and sensible Maryland laws which protect both the public and the honest tavern-keepers from the occasional "black sheep" who finds his way into this and all other industries.

In the interest of honest and reliable taverns and tavern-keepers, report to this organization any tavern-keeper who is that 1 black sheep in 100.

Beer is a wholesome drink . . . it is entitled to be served in a wholesome manner in clean, decent taverns. 99 taverns out of 100 are good taverns . . . Help to get rid of any which are not.

Steel and Aircraft Stocks Stage Rally in Belief Allies Plan Drive

Many Leaders in Other Groups Are Ignored by Traders

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 9 (AP) — It was mainly a steel and aircraft stock market today with further war-buying in these categories lifting favorites 1 to more than 2 points at the best.

The idea seemed to have taken root in Wall Street that, as soon as the British cabinet controversy is ironed out, the Allies will start a real swing at the Germans and step up briskly their orders for military materials in the United States.

While stocks with a war flavor developed strength at the start, many leaders in other groups were given the cold shoulder by speculative contingents. Extreme gains were reduced in most cases at the close, and an assortment of issues was unable to shake off small minus signs.

Transfers moved up to 847,530 shares against 694,300 the day before.

Conspicious on the upside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Vanadium, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Boeing, Curtiss-Wright, Lockheed, Wright Aeronautical, American Airlines, Weston Electric Instrument, Great Northern, U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Chrysler and International Harvester.

Up fractions to more than two in the curb were E. W. Bliss, Atlas Plywood, Heyden Chemical, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero and Standard Steel Spring. Volume here was around 196,000 shares compared with 180,000 yesterday.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, May 9 (AP)—Grain prices made a futile attempt to rally today, but banked down in the face of favorable weather, heavy wheat marketings and increased country selling of corn.

Wheat was up ¾-⅞ cent at one stage but closed ⅛-½ lower than yesterday, May $1.05⅝-¾, July $1.04⅝-½. Scattered rains and recent of 1,473,000 bushels at 12 principal terminals, compared with 1,249,000 a week ago and 1,033,000 a year ago contributed to the weakness.

Oats closed ⅜-½ lower, rye ¼-½ higher, soy beans ½-¾ lower and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Preakness Horses Get Workouts in Mud

Eight Starters Forecast for $50,000 Race

Followers Confused by too Much Information for Preakness Stakes

By MASON BRUNSON

Baltimore, May 9 (AP)—One sunny afternoon at the Pimlico race track, an overstuffed, exasperated individual slammed his program down and wailed:

There's more—tips around this place than in a can of asparagus."

His ire was vented, of course, at the numerous "tips" that circulated on various horses at any race track. Just as this rotund fellow was muddled by too much "information," so was the picture for Saturday's running of the $50,000—added Preakness Stakes clouded with some uncertainty tonight.

Doubtful Factors

Doubtful factors included this year of the starting field, the probable favorite and the weather.

Tonight it appeared likely that only eight three-year olds would be entered tomorrow for the Preakness' Golden jubilee running, although there was an outside chance of one or two more being named at the last minute.

As for the probable favorite, the choice apparently lay between Gallahadion, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Kentucky Derby winner, and Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, the runner-up.

Four other horses beaten in the Derby were considered sure Preakness starters. They were Arnold Ranger's Dit, C. S. Howard's Mioland, Tower Stable's Royal Man and W. L. Brann's Pictor.

The other two likely entries are Milldale stable's Andy K and Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance. Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Jacomar, who had been expected to start, will not enter. Trainer Alex B. Gordon said Jacomar had been injured in a stall fire.

Only four others were given any chance at all of going to the post. These outside possibilities are Mrs. C. C. Phipps' Snow Ridge, Mrs. Anthony Pelleteri's Sun Pharos, J. Y. Y. Martin's Abrasion and D. A. Prestone's Marogay.

Expect Fast Track

An overnight rain made the racing strip muddy during the workout hours this morning. It was wet and chilly and scenes around the track were reminiscent of the rain-swept Preaknesses of 1938 and 1939.

It cleared up before noon, however, and the fast-drying track was only slightly heavy by post time for the first race. A little rain was what the track needed. After a week of sunny weather it was a little too powdery.

Billion See Irish Leaders During 1930's

Notre Dame — The Irish of Notre Dame, perhaps the nation's best gridiron attraction, have played to more than 4,500,000 spectators during the last decade.

Since the late Knute Rockne became coaching the Irish 20-odd years ago the seating capacity at Notre Dame's gridiron — when temporary bleachers were provided — is 80,000. Last season 56,000 saw the Notre Dame-Southern California game. Five of Notre Dame's home games last year was sell-outs, with a top crowd — 80,000—saw the game with the Navy at Cleveland.

There are many major teams which don't draw more than 200,000 a season but crowds of 358,000 fans have seen the Irish each year of the past decade. The season high for Notre Dame was 120,000 of 1929.

The game with Army in New York is an annual sell-out.

When Praising Gallahadion Don't Forget Sir Gallahad III

AP Feature Service

Louisville — Gallahadion's triumph in the Kentucky Derby added further prestige to old Sir Gallahad III, the French-bred stallion which arrived in this country in 1925.

During the last ten years colts and fillies, carrying his blood, have figured prominently in all the rich stakes in the land, including the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes. Each year either Sir Gallahad III or one of his sons or daughters has a winning juvenile or three-year-old.

Among the children and grandchildren of Sir Gallahad III are Gallant Fox, Johnstown, Omaha, Challedon, Fighting Fox, Granville, Gallant Sir, High Quest, Pasteurized, Sir Damion and Tintagel.

Gallahadion is the latest of his descendants to win the Derby. His other son was Gallant Fox, who won in 1930. Three grandsons have won: Omaha, by Gallant Fox, in 1935; Lawrin, by his son Insco, in 1938; and Johnstown, by his daughter Laura Gal, last year.

The same success is found in the Belmont. Gallant Fox, Omaha, Granville, Pasteurized and Johnstown won. Four of his descendants won the Preakness: Gallant Fox in 1930; High Quest in 1934; Omaha in 1935 and Challedon last year.

In 1930, 1933 and 1934 Sir Gallahad III was the leading American sire. His progeny established a record in 1930 by earning $422,200.

Old Fashioned Gifts Are New In 1940 Gifts for Mother's Day

By The AP Feature Service

It's the return of old favorites that will provide something new in gifts for mother on Mother's Day this year. It isn't exactly a revival of lavender and lace, but there's the new interest in accessories merging with a renewed interest in feminine things that made grandmother a queen in calico.

Right in line with the hat designer's notion that summer chapeaux for 1940 should be sheer and fragile enough to require an ornamental anchor, the hatpin is back. One features a gay flower perched on a tiny spring.

The bar pin is back, too. Newest is black and white one decorated either with onyx and diamonds or with brilliants and enamel.

This pottery jar, filled with candy for Mother's Day, will find many uses later.

Here's a new way to give mother flowers—an old-fashioned bouquet in a wicker basket she can use in her garden.

Another novelty is the china pin or clip of pastel flowers.

Other old ideas that are new are parasols to twirl in summer sun, a scarf for daytime, evening or bed jacket; perfumes or colognes that emphasize scents of the flowers and herbs found in old-fashioned gardens. It's easy to match cologne, bath powder and soap.

If you'd like to give mother cosmetics it's best to be choosey. Some cosmetics are bright with color adopted from South America; others reflect television's influence toward darker makeup. But for most mothers it's wisest to choose her favorite powder, rouge or lipstick. There's a new compact with a stem like a watch. Twist the stem and it emits just the right amount of her favorite loose powder.

A rubber lined bag to hold mother's beauty preparations on her vacation trip.

Many families find it's a worth while idea to pool resources and buy one very special gift for mother. Other sons and daughters check with one another to be sure mother gets no duplicates in the old standbys—flowers, candy, lingerie, pocketbooks and gloves. A nice, but fairly expensive, gadget for mother's room is a tray that can be used for serving breakfast in bed and has a top that lifts to disclose a mirror and make-up set.

But whatever you give mother, do it in a special way. If she likes a flower on her desk, there's an unusual mirror and vase combination that will just turn the trick. But, if she has her heart set on something she should select herself, conceal the money you give her in a beautiful package.

Five Persons Are Injured in Gas Well Explosion

Sutton, W. Va., May 9 (AP)—Five persons were injured and several thousand dollars worth of equipment destroyed when a sixteen million cubic foot gas well being drilled on O'Brien creek, Clay county, exploded and caught fire just as it was drilled in yesterday.

Six steam boilers were taken to the scene tonight, to be used in "snuffing" out the fire tomorrow.

Those injured included: Romie Spencer, 31, of Villanova; Rance Tanner of Ruck Creek; Rody Ellis, 43, of Weston; Cromer Shamblin, Tanner of Duck Creek; Rody Ellis, 40, Orlondo, a driller.

Cause of the fire was undetermined, P. W. Festhof, Weston, assistant division superintendent of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Gas Company, for whom the well was being drilled, asserted.

Feller Shuts Out Yanks with Three Hits

Cleveland Hands New York Sixth Straight Defeat

Indians Ace Hurled No-Hit Ball for Six Innings; Score 4 to 0

New York, May 9 (AP)—Bob Feller made a gesture toward a second no-hit game today and scared the World Champion Yankees into their sixth successive defeat as the Cleveland Indians finished their Eastern swing with a 4 to 0 victory.

At the finish Feller had given three hits, but for six innings he held the bombers helpless with his fireball and the 14,790 fans were just beginning to get a threb in their throats when Joe DiMaggio singled off shortstop Lou Bordreau's glove in the seventh.

This removed the tension and Joe Gordon singled sharply past first base in the eighth and in the ninth Charley Keller rapped another single to center. Keller, however, was the only Yankee to get as far as second base.

Feller's fast one was at its sizzling best as he proceeded to fan seven batters and allow only three walks.

His slugging teammates gave him plenty of help with a run in the second and three more in the fifth off Monte Pearson, who was the last man to pitch a no-hit game before Feller's show on opening day this season.

This was the twelfth defeat in eighteen games for the champions, now in last place, but was only the third to a righthand pitcher.

Odds Favor Lou Ambers In Fight With Jenkins

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, May 9—The world is not big enough for two world's lightweight champions, and Lou Ambers, recognized in New York, Europe and Asia, intends to smack down Sammy Angott, who is hard to recognize at all without a white carnation in his buttonhole, as soon as possible.

But first Ambers has a chore to do. At Madison Square Garden this Friday evening he meets a famished Texan with umbrella ribs and a right hand like a mallet—name of Lew Jenkins, out of Sweetwater.

The odds are tolerably high in favor of Ambers, but Jenkins can make it interesting if he whacks Luigi just south of the lips. The Texan is quite a puncher.

Naturally, the world's lightweight championship of Europe, Asia and New York is all Jenkins's if he wins, and I understand that the House of Commons will hang around a radio in London all night if necessary, to learn which boy is champion of bucks . . . barks . . . wilts . . . hants . . . and salops.

N. B. A. Cut Ambers Loose

Ambers was the world's champion of everywhere up until a week ago, when, you will recall, the National Boxing Association cut him loose from forty-six states and the Isthmus of Panama by proclamation, in fee simple.

The N. B. A. awarded the world's championship to Mr. Angott for his dazzling victory over Davey Day. It dazzled Davey, if no one else, and Angott is now one of the only two living world's lightweight champions. He will continue in this capacity till he meets Ambers, an event which Samuel should postpone as long as possible if he likes the cooking up there on top.

Meanwhile, Ambers is the practical world's champion, and his challenger is Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Tex. There are three things in Mr. Jenkins's favor, namely.

1. He is managed by Hymie Caplin.

2. He can hit with his right.

3. He is hungry.

I do not remember a hungrier-looking fighter than the scourge of Sweetwater in the last ten years. His ribs are visible to the naked eye at a mile and a half, when he takes off his shirt (which is visible to the naked eye at two miles). His knees are bony, his cheeks are hollow, and his stomach is empty. When Mr. Caplin first assumed the management of this frustrated trencherman, he tried to reassure him.

Right Hand Is Lew's Fortune

"What do you care about the rest of you, Pally," said Mr. Caplin, "so long as you got your right hand?"

"If I had a bottle of ketchup," Mr. Jenkins replied, "I would of eat my right hand long ago."

That would have been a bad mistake, aside from the risk of indigestion, because Lew's right hand is his fortune. He has won twelve fights in a row in this locality, nine of them, I believe, by knockouts.

He studied to be a blacksmith, but he never got far beneath the spreading chestnut tree because horses are scarce and because he looked too hungry to please the owners of what horses there are. Glancing at Lew, and then at the horse, and then at the knife and fork on Lew's bare table, the average customer backed hastily away, taking his steed with him.

Things were so slow in the natty footwear game that Mr. Jenkins had to box for his breakfast. He soon learned the trick of knocking them over, but in spite of his success to date he is still hungry. Ambers, on the other hand, is full of home-cooked scollopini. It may make a difference.

"As soon as you have win this fight and the title," Mr. Hymie Caplin assures his protege, "everything will be dekkis-de-kekkis" (a Caplin coinage) "and you will eat all you can hold, on the contrary, but notwithstanding."

"All right," say Mr. Jenkins, who does not pay much attention to Hymie's double talk unless Mr. Caplin is telling him how to beat Ambers.

Mr. Caplin is positive that Jenkins will beat Ambers "from here to here." He may be right, but we will stick with Ambers until they carry him out of there, scollopini and all.

Dodgers Rally In Tenth To Defeat Cubs

Brooklyn Completes Western Trip with Four to One Victory

Chicago, May 9 (AP) — Brooklyn delightful Dodgers burst out with three runs in the tenth inning today to handcuff the Chicago Cubs 4 to 1 for their twelfth victory in fourteen games this season.

The score was tied at one all and two were out when the storm struck. Dixie Walker doubled, Cookie Lavagetto was purposely passed and then Dolph Camilli rapped a single into right field for a run, going to second himself on the throw in. Roy Cullenbine also was walked intentionally, filling the bases, and Pee-wee Reese shot a single into left to score two more runners.

That was the ball game that had started out as a red hot hurling battle between Tex Carleton, making his first start since his no-hitter, and Lefty French, winner of four games and defeated only once previously.

Plans for a city "Rocking Chair Softball League," to be composed of teams whose players are over 25 years of age, will be discussed at a meeting to be held next Monday evening at 5:15 at the Central Y. M. C. A.

The Junior Association of Commerce, which is initiating the idea of a league for older players, has announced it will award a trophy to the winning team.

Four groups, Cumberland Lodge No. 63, B. P. O. Elks, City Hall employes, Police Department and the Junior Association, have already expressed interest in the league and will send representatives to Monday's meeting.

Police Boys' Club Softball Practice

All candidates for softball teams to be sponsored by the Police Boys' Club this year will be expected to report to Community Park at 5:30 this afternoon for a practice session. The club will be represented in the City Softball League and probably one or two other junior loops this year.

Walters Wins Fifth Straight For Cincinnati

Reds Ace Limits Boston Bees to Five Hits; Score Is 4 to 1

Cincinnati, May 9 (AP)—Bucky Walters' five-hit ball and good stickwork put the Reds back in the win column today with a 4 to 1 decision over Boston that gave the tall righthander his fifth victory without defeat.

Striking out five and walking one, Walters yielded his first hit to Max West in the fourth and it went for the Bees' lone score, a home run.

Bucky and his shortstop, Eddie Joost, were stars of the day, each with a perfect day at the plate. Frank McCormick did his bit in the sixth, with his second circuit blow of the year.

In four times at bat, Walters bunt-singled, hung out a fifth-frame double that scored Joost from one of his three free trips to first, and twice worked walks for himself.

Joost singled his other time up and in the eighth inning, when the Reds for a third time loaded the bases, Lonnie Frey singled him home with one of the two final runs.

A Modern Napoleon Tries to Plumb the Secrets of a Woman's Heart and Gets the Usual Results

"Glory be to God!"

MARTIN ROWAN

Napoleon McHugh was a substantial block of a man. He was perhaps an inch taller than his namesake of Corsica. . He was once the schoolmaster of Ballycladdy, a good teacher, but somewhat erratic. Once he challenged the authority of a school manager. Les majeste was dangerous in Ballycladdy and Napoleon lost his job.

One day, standing on the cliffs of Ballycladdy, Napoleon McHugh spoke out loud. "There is no escape," quoth he. "Freedom must be bartered for a sinecure. I must perforce consult Patsy Don."

Patsy Dan was the matchmaker of Ballycladddy. His services were free.

"I desire to procure me a spouse, Patsy," said Napoleon, as he entered Patsy Dan's door. Formalities were unknown in Ballycladdy.

"How old are you?" asked Patsy Dan.

"I shall be 69 summers come Michaelmas," replied Napoleon.

"Is your health in reasonable condition, Napoleon?"

"Subject only to gout after gorging mylself on lucious viands and potent beverages, Patsy."

"Any particular ideals surviving from the days of your youth, Napoleon?"

"Once, about 50 years ago, there was a girl. Oh, but what the use! The barefoot pedestrian must bow in homage to the armored knight I crave security, Patsy."

"Have you thought of Peggy Finnegan of Hungry Hill, Napoleon?"

"But, Peggy has interred three husbands already, Patsy."

"There is no telling what she might do with a fourth, Napoleon. But she has land and cows. You'll need victuals and a roof over your head. She has both."

"Quite true, Patsy. It is a sad but nevertheless irrefutable fact that the ideal aspirations of things spiritual must be subjugated to mundane, corporal needs.

"Glory be to God!"

"Have you any money at all, Napoleon?"

"Not a blessed copper."

"There is only one thing that can be done then," said Patsy Dan, as he reached up on a shelf and took down a long cloth purse. "There's 40 half-sovereigns here, Napoleon, negan. If you find it hard to convince her let the purse fall out of your pocket like as if my mistake. I'll loan them to you for the day. Go up and make love to Peggy Finnegan. The grandest music a woman ever heard is the sound of gold. She'll never let the chance go by."

"Good morning, Peggy," said Napoleon McHugh as he entered Peggy Finnegan's.

There was no smile on Peggy's face. "What brings you to Hungry Mill, Mr. McHugh?"

"It is the balm of the morning and the resurrection of the dead love in my heart that compels me to wend my way to high altitudes on this auspicious day, Peggy," replied Napoleon.

"Is it out of your mind ye are?" asked Peggy, tartly.

"What do you imagine God created love for," Peggy, my sweet?" said Napoleon.

"Maybe He didn't have anything else to do that day," replied Peggy, sourly.

"Because He knew in His omnipotent wisdom that it was not good for a man to be alone, Margaret, my pet," said Napoleon.

"What are ye drivin' at, McHugh?" said Peggy, with asperity.

"Love's young dream, Margaret, my pulse," said Napoleon.

"Go home and wash your shirt, McHugh," said Peggy.

"Ah! Such sordid and mundane thought!" sighed McHugh, as he withdrew a polka-dotted handkerchief from his pocket to wipe away a tear. His purse fell out and gold coins rolled on the floor.

"Glory be to God!" said Peggy. "Where did ye get all the money?"

"There are £20 there and there is more where that came from, light of my life," replied Napoleon.

"Sit down and make yourself at home, Napoleon. I'll make a drop of tay. It must be tired ye are after yer long walk up the hill," said Peggy.

"God save all here," said a voice Peggy looked up.

"Glory be to God," said she. "If it isn't Ned O'Malley that went to America 35 years ago." She extended both hands in welcome. "I never forgot your face, Ned, and when did ye come home?"

"Yesterday, Peggy," replied Ned. "I never forgot your face, either. Do you remember that day 40 years ago when you fell into my arms while we were picking blackberries?"

"I was dreaming of that the night after my third husband died, a year ago," said Peggy.

"Strange that I dreamed the same thing the night my second wife died two years ago," said Ned O'Malley.

"Mental telepathy pure and simple," chirped in Napoleon McHugh.

"This is Mr. McHugh that used to be a schoolmaster here, Ned," introduced Peggy.

The men shook hands.

"Are ye goin' to stay in Ireland long, Ned?" asked Peggy.

"For good, Peg. I may have to make a brief trip to the States to sell my property and close my estate."

"I'll bet yer property is worth more than £20, Ned?" queried Peggy.

"Twenty pounds!" scoffed Ned. "Why, Peg, £20 would not last me a week for pocket money. I'm a wealthy man."

Peggy walked over and stood beside Ned. She looked into his eyes and sighed. "I'm glad ye came home, Ned," she said.

Ned looked into Peggy's eyes. He saw the light he had dreamed of for 40 years. He put his arm around her waist. She rested her head on his shoulder. Napoleon McHugh coughed. New O'Mally gave him a baleful look.

"Scram, fellah!" said Ned.

"Be goin' on home wit ye, McHugh," said Peggy.

Napoleon McHugh went out and slammed the door.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

Objection Is Made To Using Goats To Test Explosive

Baltimore, May 8 (AP)—An injunction application to prevent Lester P. Barlow, Baltimore inventor from testing a new explosive on live goats, has been filed in Circuit court by the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Barlow had announced that the test of his explosive, a liquid oxygen-carbon mixture called "gimite," would be conducted May 16 at the Aberdeen, Md., proving ground of the War Department.

Several weeks ago, when the plan was first made known, an Illinois pet magazine filed injunction proceedings in the same court, but the action was dismissed two days ago when the plaintiff failed to post the necessary bond.

Judge C. Gus Grason signed an order giving Barlow until May 22 to show cause why the injunction should not be granted, provided he is served with the court order on or before May 15.

Barlow contends that the concussion from his "super-bomb" will kill anything within a radius of 1,000 feet.

The S.P.C.A. petition said the demonstration "will result in the infliction by extreme and most severe cruelty of wounds, lacerations, suffering and agony upon any animal or animals that may be used x x x."

Red Sox Take Second Straight from Tigers

Single in Tenth By Peacock Is Deciding Blow

Boston Stretches Victory String to Four Straight; Score 6-5

Boston, May 9 (AP)—Pinch-hitter Johnny Peacock punched out a single with the bases loaded in the tenth today to give the Red Sox a 6-5 win over Detroit and a clean sweep of the two-game series.

While stretching their victory string to four straight, the league-leading sockers permitted the Tigers to come from behind and deadlock the game against starter Denny Galehouse in the seventh.

Thereupon rookie Herb Hash took over and kept the visitors under control until Peacock broke up the game.

After Joe Cronin registered the first Boston run in the fourth, Jimmy Foxx tripled with the bases jammed in the fifth and then scored on his manager's fly.

With one out in the tenth, Cronin smashed out his second two-bagger of the game and, after Doerr and Tom Tabor were passed by Alton Benton, the fourth Detroit flinger, Peacock rolled down the curtain while batting for catcher Gene Desautels.

St. Louis Downs Athletics 4 to 2

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP) — St. Louis took advantage of the wildness of pitcher Johnny Babich and, backed by Bob Harris' airtight hurling, turned back the Athletics, 4 to 2 before a Ladies Day crowd of 2,000 today.

Babich, undefeated in three previous starts, issued three walks and was nicked for two singles in the first inning to give the Brownies three runs and was yanked in favor of Herman Besse after walking the first batter to face him in the second. Meanwhile Harris scattered seven Athdetic hits and was airtight with men on base.

Cardinals Win After Bad Start

St. Louis, May 9 (AP) — After a wobbly start, the St. Louis Cardinals pulled themselves together behind the relief hurling of rookie Ernie White and, aided by Stu Martin's fourth homer in three days, handed the Phillies an 8 to 4 setback for a clean sweep of the two game series.

Murray Dickson, another rookie, allowed the Phils three runs in the first inning. The Redbirds came back, however, with four runs off Walter Higbe and Lloyd Brown, but when the Phils threatened again in the second, White was called in.

Catcher Bill Delancey, who has recovered from a five-year illness, was inserted in the Cardinal lineup for the second time since 1935.

THE TWO HIGH SPOTS

There are two high spots over this weekend, starting Friday night. One involves a man—the other a horse. This includes a big portion of the sporting kingdom. The man is Lou Ambers, lightweight champion. The horse is Bimelech.

Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., won, lost and re-won the lightweight title. He needed a triple somersault. On Friday night at Madison Square Garden he must defend his crown against Lew Jenkins of Texas, a fellow who can really step out and fight.

On Saturday at Pimlico a horse by name of Bimelech, the 1-2 favorite beaten in the recent Kentucky Derby, must prove where he belongs in the Preakness.

Lou Ambers, the man, came back. Can Bimelech, the horse, come back against Gallahadion, his conqueror, and a flock of other stars which have a chance?

Lou Ambers, getting along in years and ring experience, must meet a young, tough, hungry entry who can supply the two main ingredients — he can give it and he can take it.

Ambers and Jenkins, without any thought of ballyhoo, should present one of the best lightweight contests in many years. For one reason, both are tough and both happen to like the subtle art of throwing leather.

The average fight, about ninety percent of all fights, might be called "the battle of bums." Most of contestants can't box a lick, or fight a lick. The ring game has degenerated into a scramble of incompetents. Outside of Joe Louis, Henry Armstrong, and Lou Ambers, the vast majority is 98 per cent ham.

Down at Pimlico

The Preakness at Pimlico on Saturday offers the most interesting situation the track has known in many years.

We came along to the Kentucky Derby. Bradley's Bimelech had won eight straight races. To owners and trainers he was "the unbeatable horse. I happen to know the others were all thinking in terms of second place.

There was also a horse by the name of Gallahadion. He had been beaten 14 times. He had won one major race. I had seen him beaten 15 lengths by Sweeplida, a third-class unknown. Bimelech had run Gallahadion's nose and feet into Kentucky dust five days before the big race. After that Gallahadion had to pick up 11 additional pounds.

In his two-and three-year career the Derby winner had shown nothing you could add up or photograph. He was just another horse — and not a good one. Maybe just another plow horse.

But Gallahadion won the Derby, over three seconds or ten lengths back of record time. He did a good job, his second good performance in over fifteen starts.

For example, Pictor, William Brann's main hope, started last and finished last in the most consistent no-good performance the Derby track has ever known. We all know Pictor isn't that bad, just as we all know Gallahadion isn't that good.

There Are Others

At this point you might recall the fact that Gallahadion and Bimelech are not the only horses who will be churning up the dust or mud of Maryland.

There will also be a horse called Dit. There will be another horse by the name of Mioland. There will be a horse by the name of Your Chance. There will be at least six horses with a chance under a warming spring sun which can make a deep difference. In addition to the above named we must also watch such horses as Carrier Pigeon and Flight Command. Maybe Pictor.

Bill Brann's horses can certainly hustle along over Maryland tracks. A year ago Johnstown beat Challedon at least eight lengths at Churchill Downs, and then Challedon came back at Pimlico to run away from the Big Flood. And over the same track Challedon took the full and complete measure of Kayak II.

So the Preakness, older than the Kentucky Derby, isn't a race dedicated to Bimelech and Gallahadion alone.

In my opinion, Bimelech is still the horse to beat. His record is a standout — eight wins out of nine starts and over $150,000 on the money-winning side. Bimelech is either not as great a horse as he looked to be or he caught a cuppy track he couldn't handle. This has happened to Seabiscuit, Kayak, and Johnstown, which were no mules.

More than a few trainers, including Maxie Hirsch, rated the track at Churchill Downs on the tricky side. It looked fast enough, but evidently it was not. There was a coat of shining crust that broke too quickly. There was a skid and a slip, which helped to make the race an open affair.

I happen to know that the owners of Dit and Mioland, also the two trainers, believe their horses can travel at a much faster pace over a normal track. All of which helps to churn up the situation and so baffle the bystanders even more.

Young Children Should Not Get Up too Early

Parents Should Have Regular Hour for Baby To Arise

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

As the days grow longer babies and young children want to arise earlier. But it is not well for babies and young children to get up with the birds. Consider the sleep they lose when they do and sleep their mothers also lose.

Regardless of the season, many babies and young children don't sleep nearly long enough in the morning. Some young children, especially on the farm, get up when their parents do—at four or five or six—and stay up till their parents go to bed. Such need not happen. It won't if the parents make a sensible plan and carry this plan through.

You say it can't be done, except with a few children? Yes, it can. It was done with our children and it was done with many other children I have studied. The cost in pain to the parent and child to accomplish it is about nothing. The gain to both parent and child in comfort, health and general welfare is ten thousand-fold, perhaps.

Decide on a desirable hour for the tot to get up in the morning. Set the alarm clock for that time. When the clock rings go for the child, or if he is old enough let him get up and dress alone. If he awakens earlier let that be his privilege, but he must not stand in the crib or get out of his cot till the designated time. If he does, give him pain without exception—a good smacking, preferably. Don't tell him to go back to sleep, merely that he must not get up. If you hold yourself literally to this program, he will find the world so drab and unattractive that he will, after a few mornings, just fall back to sleep. But if you are inconsistent, don't hold yourself rigidly to the clock, or if in any way you create the slightest doubt in his mind about the program, he will hold out indefinitely—beg, whine, cry and create all sorts of disturbances.

Then don't expect him to sleep later on Sunday or the Fourth of July than any other day. He should rise at exactly the same hour the year around. Continue with this program indefinitely after the child enters school. As he nears adolescence, even earlier, he may want to sleep longer than his school program will allow.

Some parents, thinking only of their own comfort and welfare, will allow the child to get up and play quietly with his toys whenever he happens to awaken. It's their child, of course, but if they are considering his health and welfare, they probably will prefer to train him to sleep until a regular reasonable hour in the morning. They should remember that it is not only the hour when a child goes to bed that determines how much he sleeps, but also the time when he awakens in the morning. They should realize, moreover, that the child who chooses least sleep is the very child who needs most of it, being so excitable and high-strung.

You may have a chart of desirable hours of sleep for children at various ages by writing me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Ambers Is Favored To Retain His Crown

Will Meet Lew Jenkins Tonight In New York

Puts His Crown on the Line against Fighter from Texas

By SID FEDER

New York, May 9 (AP)—Ever since Lou Ambers won the world lightweight championship the first time back in 1936, he has had the doubtful pleasure of tangling with punching specialists rather than less dangerous skilled boxers every time the chips were down.

And, now that he's getting along in years, so far as fistic experience is concerned, he's too old to change the habit at this stage of the game.

So he puts his crown on the line again tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden against another knocker-outer—Texas Lew Jenkins, a swatter from Sweetwater, who has disposed of his last three opponents in a total of five rounds.

Promoter Mike Jacobs figures the chances of a "kayo," plus Ambers' only recently-recognized ability as one of the classiest lightweights in years, should draw some 15,000 into the Garden to take in the show in which the Herkimer (N. Y.) Hurricane defends his title for the first time since he regained it from Henry Armstrong last August.

Despite Jenkins' right-hand cannon and left hook, this corner strings along with the twenty-six-year-old champion in this one, although there is the word that Ambers has had trouble making the weight, and that he may have to sacrifice some of his speed in getting down to 135 for the first time since he last faced Armstrong.

New York Wallops Pirates 17 to 6

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP)—In a travesty on baseball, the Pirates made seven errors and five of their pitchers gave up fifteen hits, ten bases on balls and hit three batsmen today in the process of collapsing in their ninth consecutive defeat 17 to 6 before the New York Giants.

Seven of the New Yorkers' runs were crammed into the first inning off Max Butcher and Dick Lanahan and the rout was on.

Carl Hubbell gave up a run to the Pittsburgh on two hits in the first, but thereafter allowed no hits until the seventh and even though the Pirates rallied for five runs in the last two frames, the veteran lefthander lasted till the final out. It was his first victory against two defeats.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, May 9 (AP) — It was fun while it lasted, anyway, so most of those ninety-one young ball players cut loose from Detroit by Commissioner Landis haven't any kick coming. The went up in a hurry and came down the same way, many of them with nice bonus checks in their pockets.

Interest in the fate of the free lancers has been centered on Benny McCoy and Roy Cunnenbine. Connie Mack rather hesitantly paid McCay $45,000 to sign, and the Dodgers gave up $25,000 to get Cullenbine, and right now it appears both players were worth their prices.

Little has been heard from the other eighty-nine players, and, with a few possible exceptions, little will be heard from them. Most of them are just old sailors. They've gone back to the C, or even D, after brief adventures in double A.

Many Bonuses Paid

When Landis made his proclamation there was an immediate rush by AA and even Major clubs to sign up these wandering minstrels. The reasoning was simple, to wit: The Tigers had signed them, so they must be good. Many a bonus was paid to some lad who never would sing in anything but the key of C.

The International League offers a fair cross-section of the past, present and future of this group of young men.

International League clubs acquired a total of fifteen of them, including two or three who were signed by a parent Major League club and put in the keeping of the farm. Only three remain on the roster, and four were unconditionally released. The other eight have been optioned out or sold to clubs of lesser classification.

The three among those present are Steve Rachunok, pitcher with Montreal who was with Henderson, Tex., last year; Dan Litwhiler, out of action last year and signed by the Phillies, and now optioned to Baltimore, and Dale Jones, with Lake Charles, La., last year and also now on option at Baltimore.

Rochester picked up four of the free agents. None is with the club now. Ed Bongard, not in pro ball last year, has been shipped to Cooleemee, N. C.; Ray Hart, pitcher with Fulton, Ky., last year, has been sent to New Orleans; John Fuller, another newcomer to pro ball, has been released outright, as has John Mandreger, who pitched in the Ohio State League in 1939.

Newark Takes Johnson

Newark took only John Johnson, with Toledo in 1939, and he also has been released unconditionally.

Montreal, Brooklyn's new farm, in addition to Steve Rachunok, acquired John Rachunok, Paul Gillespie and Alphonseus Sinomonis. John Rachunok, with Alexandria, La., last year, has been sent to Dayton, and from there to Grand Rapids. Sinomonis, with Fulton, Ky., in 1939, is with Elmira, as is Gillespie, a Lake Charles product.

All of which would indicate that ball players, like water, eventually will find their level. You can toss a bucket of water in the air and it will come down again, and you can toss a ball player into double A ball but that doesn't mean he'll stay there, even if he was signed by a Major League club originally.

Most of them were moved up too fast, but Landis gave them their chance, and look at the experience they got.

Boxing Show To Be Staged at Armory Tonight

Boxers from Four States Will Appear on Card Starting at 8:30

Boxers from Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Virginia will appear at the State Armory here tonight on the thirty-four round show sponsored by the Cumberland Athletic Club which will get under way at 8:30 o'clock.

The feature fighter on the card is "Tiger Red" Lewis, of Richmond, Virginia, light-heavyweight whose work is being praised by boxing experts in the east and south.

Lewis, who meets Ira Hughes, rugged Pittsburgh negro, in the top eight-rounder, entered 1940 with a record of 60 victories in 75 professional starts—and 1939 was his best year. He had one string of 15 consecutive victories, 11 of them by knockouts, and if he disposes of Hughes the C. A. C. impresarios are likely to bring him back at an early date to meet another tough battler.

District fans caught only a fleeting glance of Hughes when he gained a technical knockout over Charlie Brant, Somerset, Pa., scrapper, here several months ago, but they saw enough to become convinced that Hughes can take care of himself.

West Virginia's lone representative is that state's welterweight champion, Carl Turner of Fairmont, and he's down on the books to meet Charlie Burns, hustling Johnstown, Pa., jolter, who has survived rousing battles with Henry Armstrong, Lou Ambers and other glove greats without becoming punch drunk. Both Turner and Burns have fought here in recent months, the former decisioning Bill Niland in six rounds and the latter—handicapped at the time by a heavy chest cold—dropping a ten-round verdict to Ray Ingram of Washington.

Niland, gradually regaining the respect and admiration of district fans, moves up to the eight-round class, following a series of four and six-round appearances, against "Woody" Boord of Uniontown, Pa. Boord and Niland were amateur contemporaries for several years, but the former turned pro before Niland and has filled ten-round main bout bookings in Baltimore and other cities.

The clash between Western Maryland's new heavyweight king, Clarence "Kayo" Shrout, and Charlie Brant is supposed to go six heats, but most of the customers will be surprised if the bell rings for the third. Brant packs a lethal left and Shrout has developed a dynamite-laden right to score knockouts in three of his four professional scraps.

The shows four-round opener will bring together "Bucky" Walbert, of Cumberland, and Al Madero, of Frostburg, a couple of ambitious middleweights.

Groh's Bottle Bat Style Still in Use

Louisville (AP) — A few baseball players still order a model of Heinie Groh's freak bottle-sized bat, says Henry Morrow of the Hillerich and Bradsby bat factory here. But he figures that only Groh could hit successfully with a bat of that type. Groh's bat weighed 34 ounces, was 40 inches long and 2¾ inches in diameter at the thickest part.

Senators Defeat Chicago 8 to 4

Washington, May 9 (AP)—Paced by the homers of Jimmy Bloodworth and Jimmy Pofahl, the Washington Senators today beat the Chicago White Sox 8-4. Dutch Leonard scattered ten hits to win his second victory of the year for Washington.

Chicago had a 3 to 1 lead until Pofahl socked his round-tripper in the sixth. The Sox got their runs scoring one in the third on three hits and an infield out, and two in the fifth.

Washington tied it up in the seventh when George Case doubled and tallied on Gerald Walker's single. Zeke Bonura then walked, Cecil Travis scored Walker with a single and Bloodworth drove Bonura and Travis across with his home run.

The Senators added another run in the eighth.

Frostburg Elks Will Stage Three Day Celebration, May 17-19

Making Plans For B. P. O. Elks Home Opening

Souvenir Booklet Will Be Feature of Fine Program

Frostburg, May 9 — Plans for the official opening of the new home of Frostburg Lodge, No. 470, B. P. O. Elks, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, will be completed this week. Arrangements are being made to entertain visiting Elks from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia.

Rooming facilities for the visitors will be arranged by a committee consisting of Frank R. Keene, Richard Holben and Benjamin Huntsman.

The program, although not completed, will include a reception Friday afternoon and evening, trips to various points of interest in the county on Saturday and an impressive ceremonial at the new home Sunday. The reception for the visitors will be in charge of a committee consisting of J. William Shea, James S. Davis, Calvin A. Holben, Dilmond M. James, Robert Lemmert, DeWayne McAtee, William Davis, Earl Weishaur, W. E. G. Hitchins and John Stewart.

The entertainment committee, consisting of Dr. W. O. McLane, John Durst, Joseph Lyons, Chester Stewart and John Keller, will meet this week to put the finishing touches on their part of the program. This committee will provide professional entertainers and make plans for a buffet luncheon in connection with the various social functions in connection with the opening.

The publicity committee, consisting of Upton B. F. Edwards, Randolph Nickel, Charles Dillon and William W. Sluss, has compiled a souvenir program in the form of a booklet of fifty pages which will contain the complete program and interesting information concerning the lodge from the date of its inception to the present time.

A "general information" committee consisting of John L. Casey, A. Charles Stewart, William Lemmert and Joseph Condon, will assist the other committees with all the plans being arranged for the three days of the opening.

The new home is being further improved this week by the construction of a new poolroom in the basement. The room, fully equipped, will be ready for the opening. The upper floors, completely furnished several months ago, will be given a house cleaning this week and the grounds around the building will be groomed and placed in apt shape for the inspection of the grand lodge officers and other members of the fraternity who will be here for the opening.

Garrett County Schools Promoting an "Art Week"

Oakland, May 9—Garrett county is initiating an "art week" of its own.

For the first time, rural and graded elementary school children of Garrett county will exhibit their art work. Beginning week May 13 art exhibitions will be held at Red House, Oakland and Kitzmiller.

Work in these exhibitions has been selected as a result of a broadened art program in the county schools during the past year. Four hundred examples of school art including crayon, water color, charcoal and craftwork will be shown.

The art shows will be held at the following centers:

Red House, Monday, May 13, afternoon and night. Oakland, Tuesday, May 14, night; Wednesday, May 15, morning, Kitzmiller, Thursday, May 16, afternoon.

Program will consist of musical selections, talks by Mrs. Caroline Wilson, Miss Catherine Baker, and F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools; cartoon drawing by high school students and selections by elementary school pupils.

The new art program has endeavored to encourage creative ability in art rather than imitation. The pieces to be shown reflect this to an amazing degree. This, plus the fact that there are so many schools represented, make it certain that this exhibition will be educational and entertaining. Lack of a museum in this vicinity will make such opportunities valuable to the public.

This work has been accomplished through the cooperation of the teachers with Mrs. Caroline Wilson, supervising teacher, and Miss Catherine Baker, special art teacher.

New Oakland Company Will Employ Seventy

Will Make Staves and Other Forest Products

Oakland, Md., May 9 — The Oakland Lumber Company, a new concern here that will employ approximately 70 men when geared to full capacity, is now operating in Oakland.

For the past week the company has been employing about twenty men at the mill and on the timber tract recently purchased, according to James Merriken, manager. The chief operation by the concern will be the manufacture of staves, but other forest products will also be manufactured, it was stated.

The company recently purchased certain timber on the Herrington Manor tract through an arrangement with the State Forestry Department and the probabilities are that the operations by the lumbering concern will last for a period of five years or possibly longer.

The mill is located along the Baltimore and Ohio tracks just west of town, and near Washington spring crossing where lumber and staves are to be manufactured. The machinery for making staves is expected within a few days. Mr. Merriken said the company would also accept logs from any individual having them for sale. Oak timber is used mainly in the manufacture of staves. Mr. Merriken has an office in the Garrett National Bank building.

New Garage

Practically all excavation work was completed yesterday for the new garage to be erected by Ralph Pritts on Liberty street. The building will be of concrete blocks with a brick front and will be modern in design, according to present plans. It will have a frontage on Liberty street of 70 feet, running back 150 feet to the alley, and an L-shaped addition in rear of 50 feet by 60 feet, making a frontage of 120 feet along the alley.

The use of steel girders in construction will eliminate the need of supporting posts within the garage itself and will allow ample room for working and storage space. Construction will not begin for two weeks or more, pending awarding of contracts.

Sidewalks Replaced

Portions of the sidewalks in the business district, Second and Elder streets, are being replaced with concrete walks and curbs, through a project with the WPA and an arrangement with property owners. The work began this week and will take about three weeks to complete, according to James Pollock, local representative for WPA.

Property owners have agreed to furnish material needed while the WPA will furnish labor and the concrete mixer. The east side of Second street, between Green and Alder, and the north side of Alder from the First National Bank to the Treacy property are being improved at present and when this portion is improved other parts of the street will be torn up and improved.

It is the present plan of the Mayor and City Council to widen the streets four feet and make the sidewalks on each side of the street two feet narrower.

The sidewalks will be constructed of concrete, replacing the brick sidewalks that have been down for a number of years, which have become uneven and at some places even dangerous. About ten men are employed on the project.

Huntington, W. Va., May 9. (AP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend told an audience dominated by oldsters here tonight that both the Democratic and Republican parties had "failed."

He predicted in his address that a new organization would develop from the pension clubs bearing his name "to form a rational national policy."

Townsend did not mention any of the candidates in the state primary Tuesday, but a telegram was read from U. S. Senator Rush D. Holt, a candidate for Democratic renomination, sending his good wishes.

Looking Your Best Takes Time

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH buttons gone into the limbo of forgotten things and zippers ever at hand, dressing is done in a jiffy. Too much of a jiffy, we think. It is the hurried dresser who has stray hairs on her shoulders, powder in patches, collar squeegee.

Take your time, particularly if you are making the big date, want to put the other girls' eyes out. Have a warm bath to lull your nervous system to sleep and to untense your muscles. Cream your face beforehand; the cream and the steam in the bathroom will give your complexion freshness and color.

Spare 10 minutes for a complete flop with cold compresses on your eyes. Not stingy little gauze pads, but a heavy washcloth. If the flesh around the soul orbs is swollen, cold water will deflate it.

Condition the complexion for make-up. You can use a foundation if you like—there are different forms for dry and oily skins—but be sure to follow directions precisely and exactly. Begin powdering at the collar bones, work upward, include the shoulders and the back of the neck. Use a magnifying mirror when tinting the lips and touching the lashes with mascara. Make-up is a fine art these days. The girl who splashes on the batik is committing a beauty crime.

Don't cut your finger-nails with manicure scissors; they will thicken and grow hard. Use a metal file, run the orange wood stick under the eave, use the beveling file of sandpaper.

Apply cuticle cream every night of your life, no matter how sleepy you may be. Your talons will be delicate and rosy, you'll never have a battle with a hangnail. Friction the nails to stimulate the underlying blood streams that give them coloring.

A nail white pencil is convenient. You can form a fine point by slipping it in your pencil sharpener. Dip it in water, pass it under the nail eaves, forming a clear-cut line.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PLATINUM blondes are doing the disappearing act. You don't see many of them any more. The reason? Poor tresses go all to pot, get dried out and look terrible. That is, unless one has expert professional treatment. Even then the silky shafts may suffer and go into a decline.

White henna is the medium used, and that's a joke. There's no such thing. Peroxide and ammonia are combined, in proper proportions, with magnesium carbonate to form a paste which is applied quickly and evenly to the silky mop. Now and then a little is scraped away to see how the bleaching is progressing. The hair is shampooed and a lemon rinse follows.

To attain the white-gold shade, the hair must be bleached to the limit. If the operator goes beyond the limit, the hair shafts lose glitter and life. They break at a touch of the comb. Just why a girl with golden hair should want to look as if she had gone grey, we don't know.

For a time the fad had wide popularity. Then the results showed up. Some of the "plats" had their hair dyed a pretty chestnut shade. Some just endured the transition period, which is pretty terrible, the hair being darker and of different shades near the scalp.

Sore, sensitive spots on the inner surfaces of the gums may be due to some substance caught between the teeth or wedged under the gum. Our favorite dentist tells us he is always treating unhappy patients who have particles of popcorn stored away to cause discomfort. Sometime he digs out pieces of nuts, even raisin stems.

If soreness is prolonged, it is best to see a dentist, since an open wound invites infection. Rinsing the mouth with a salt solution is recommended. If foreign particles cling between the teeth and the brush will not remove them, use dental floss. But be gentle so as not to cause an abrasion of the flesh.

KATHRYN ADAMS . . . achieves a chic coiffure without aid of tinting.

Girl Does

Forget the Curbston

To youngsters who like to take the bit in their teeth, and go the limit while the flash of youth lasts, the foregoing doesn't apply. But if you're normal and want a little home of your own—husband, children—don't meet the boy friend on the curbstone week after week, month after month. Naturally, if his intentions are serious, he wants to know what kind of a family you come from. He'd like to meet mother and dad, and see how they compare with his own family.

N. B.: Dad! please don't utilize the occasion to hand out what you feel should be done about the war in Europe, conditions here at home, of even the weather, to Mary Jane's young man. Give the young people a chance!

Landlady Too Attentive

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My son under 21 years of age is boarding with a spinster nearly 50. Some friends of mine suggested this boarding place, thinking my boy would be well taken care of, and the spinster would look out for him in a kind, motherly fashion. Alas, she has, far too kind and motherly.

She calls him pet names, combs his hair, sits in his lap, and claims she is only mothering him.

At the same time she is turning him against his best friends, by false accusations. I think she is not only jealous of them, but is afraid of their influence, and is due an eye-opener from me if she doesn't stop her scheming ways.

Don't you think it would be better for him to move?

WORRYING MOTHER.

To my way of thinking, combing a lodger's hair, especially if he's one-half the landlady's age, seems taking an unfair advantage of a boy of 21, though most boys would be immune to such middle-aged attentions. If you can get him to move peaceably, don't you think it would be better to pass up what you call the "eye-opener?"

Wants to Write

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Six months ago I fell in love with a girl, and I can't seem to get up enough courage to tell her so. Now I want to write her. What should I say and how? I would like her to believe I can use words with a lot of expression and that I am highly educated. I've had about two or three dates a week with her, and I think she cares for me. Se is 20 and I am 24.

JACK.

y I like your letter very much and that's why I'm using it. Men and women go to school, to colleges, to universities, and they travel extensively, all for the purpose of increasing their cultivation. They go through all kinds of changes in taste, beginning generally with what is called a "high falutin' style." But in the end they conclude, as do the really great writers and speakers of the world, that the best of all styles is found in simplest expressions. Read "Arabian Nights," the Holy Bible, all of the classics, in proof of this statement of mine.

Whatever your style, preserve in it, by all means, that simple, sincere personality that I find so charming in your letter.

Just Holds Her Close

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young man of 23 for about ten months, and in all this time he has never said anything about love. Sometimes when we are alone he will hold me close to him without saying a word. I wonder sometimes if there isn't someone else he is bounds to in some way. I love him so much.

I believe he thinks a great deal of me, but doesn't want to admit it. Is there any way I can make him love me? He is a fine young man and any girl would be proud to have him for a husband.

JANE.

It seems to me that you're making pretty fair progress with this young man, and if you don't try to "rush" him, you're likely to make even more. Very often boys are slower about falling in love than girls and they make haste more slowly in the matter of being demonstrative. A little patience on the part of a girl has kept many a likely lover from straying.

Prisoners Are Playful

Hinton, W. Va., May 9 (AP)—Prosecutor Thomas L. Read said he may have to use a lie detector to find out who inflicted painful burns on Josepht Hart, sixty-year-old transient who was injured as he slept in the county jail.

Somebody tied paper around Hart's foot, the prosecutor said, and set it afire. All the prisoners denied guilt.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

THE CHARACTERS:
BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires
GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson,
JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology.

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE FIRST meal Gayle Dixon had eaten in The Oaks was one of quiet, sun-gemmed beauty; natural luxury so profound that the excellent food itself was all but unnoticed. That had been breakfast, on the sun porch with Bill.

But dinner, at which she was quite unexpectedly coerced into the role of hostess, was an occasion of an altogether different sort. The very walls of the Merrifield mansion appeared to shout their pleasure at seeing youthful good times revived.

Gayle wisely decided that this dinner should be as natural and simple as her hurried supervision could make it. She avoided any formal note, partly because the trend of events seemed to be that way this evening, partly because The Oaks had been rather steeped in formality of late anyway, she realized. Mr. Merrifield's saying of grace was a beautiful touch. She had not expected it; indeed, she had simply not thought of it—to her shame.

"I want you to know, Mr. Merrifield, that yours was a very lovely prayer, and that asking a blessing at mealtime is a fine custom, I think." Gayle said that in all sincerity, looking at her employer and host.

"Check," echoed Bill Bailey. "I was trying to figure a way to say just that, sir. I—well, I—say, why are people embarrassed about asking a blessing, anyway?"

Mr. Merrifield turned to him in surprise. "I am not embarrassed, young sir."

But Bill was, anew. Tempe Hyde all but giggled, at him, and Gayle's eyes twinkled. Bill devoted himself earnestly to a fruit cocktail.

A moment later Mr. Merrifield spoke again.

"I feel that this is an auspicious evening. Isn't it pleasant, Mr. Weems? Isn't it, sir?"

"Oh, of course, sir. Yes, indeed. I was just thinking, how thoughtful of you to arrange a little party this way for Mr. Jeremy."

"Now that's something!" Bill spoke up.

A party! Why, sure, a little dinner surprise for Jeremy! That would account for the presence of all the girls, for Bill himself. Jeremy had looked wonderingly at them during the introductions before dinner. Bill looked quickly at Gayle now, and she nodded.

"You see, Jeremy, you hadn't been in town very long, and so your grandfather wanted you to meet some, uh, nice people your age, and all. We were lucky to be the ones, eh girls?"

The six picked up the cue nicely. In truth, they had felt a certain jittery restraint of their own—a wonderment at their astonishing employ. Now they could see a course and play it.

The talk mounted. Small, spontaneous talk. And laughter. Jeremy took little or no part in it mainly because he was shy and had no ready answers, no quick repartee. But his obvious brightness and interest were enough. It was his party. The actors played to him.

The cocktail was followed by a simple roast beef. Simple, that is, save for the huge size of it, and the extraordinary savor. It was mountainous before Mr. Merrifield, and its aroma was delicious. Little bubbles of suet still broiled audibly on its brown crust when it was set on the table. Mr. Merrifield liked to carve.

There were vegetables, celery hearts, two kinds of olives, sweet peach pickles of a kind Gayle had never tasted before, hot biscuits, coffee or tea. Chinaware was a Haviland dating well back into the last century, gold on white—priceless. Silver was old sterling. Linen was hand drawn—"done by a Mexican woman from one of the Merrifield mining towns in Arizona."

Drawing Jeremy out of his shell was a part of Bill's duty.

Mr. Weems explained when Gayle inquired. Dessert was a lemon-milk sherbet—a perfect tangy aftermath to a somewhat hearty meal. Wallace the cook had to be sent for so that he might hear the enthusiastic praise. Being quite human, he loved it.

"It is all so very fine," Gayle took the hostess reins again over the coffee cups, "that I think the banquet should have at least a few speeches. Nothing too serious, perhaps. But—nice. You know what I mean. Who will be first speaker?"

"I nominate Mr. Bailey."

"Mr. Weems."

"Mr. Merrifield."

"It's Jeremy's party. Why shouldn't he be the—"

"But I'm acting as hostess," Gayle interrupted the quick flow of suggestions, "and so I call on that well-known public speaker, Miss Tempe Hyde!"

Tempe turned pink even as she giggled, and the laughter grew in a crescendo around her. She ducked under a napkin. She tried to dodge under the table itself, but she was crowded rather close to Jeremy Tucker, who sat at Gayle's right, and so could not find physical escape. Everybody else began applauding.

"I hate you, Gayle Dixon!" the smaller girl finally shrieked, "but I'll make a speech if Jeremy will. It's his party, not mine."

Jeremy turned out to be a gentleman. Somewhat solemnly he got to his feet, addressed the others formally, and did say a surprising three minutes of good words. He thanked them for their kindness in arranging this welcome. He spoke haltingly of friendship's value. Then he thanked Miss Dixon and sat down. A harmless, colorless speech.

The applause was polite, but the attention flew right back to Tempe. Still pink, she sat there in giggly misery.

"Called your bluff, Tempe, old kid!" Bill egged her on. "The floor's yours."

"Speech! Speech! Speech!"

She could not ignore the chorus now. "Whatever will I talk about? Oh, dear!"

"Something deep," Bill prompted. "Like—oh, science, war, economics."

Everybody laughed at that prospect. Tempe, pretty and dainty as a pom-pom, just didn't look profound. But she inhaled deeply and stood up—a good sport what ever the pain!

"I choose economics—I hope you'll forgive me, Mr. Merrifield, but here I go:

"There was a young man who
saved up for the future,
He put in his money bags all
he could spare.
But alas for the poor economical moocher—
The future arrived and the man wasn't there!"

There was an instant of silence. Tempe sat down, blushing at her temerity. Then the storm broke.

"HAW-W-W-W!" Mr. Merrifield led it with an outburst surprisingly basso for his age. He banged the table so that dishes jumped. Graham, the butler, hastened back to the room in some alarm.

During the laughter the two old men arose, and when the spontaneous talk had subsided again everybody was back at the piano. If Bill Bailey had guided them there without their realizing it, no matter. He saw that Jeremy Tucker had broken his ascetic countenance with an actual smile; drawing Jeremy out of his shell was a part of Bill's duty.

Gayle began playing again, softly because Mr. Merrifield had cornered Tempe Hyde and was making her teach him the funny little poem on economy. He repeated it twice. When he could say it all through, he turned from her.

"Mr. Weems!" he bellowed. "Take some telegrams—haw!"

"Telegrams, sir? Did we overlook—"

Poor Mr. Weems was proud of his efficiency as the Merrifield business secretary. His consternation showed suddenly.

"Certainly, Mr. Weems! Is your hearing failing? I said telegrams. Telegrams, sir!"

"Oh, of course, sir!"

Within an hour Mr. Benjamin W. Merrifield had spent about $100 of his assets communicating with a dozen or so big business executives, some of them in far distant places, all of them famous for their financial strength. And each one of them chuckled appreciatively over an after-dinner speech heard that evening in the historic Merrifield mansion.

Oddly enough, one of the men who received the little rhyme was in Mexico City, Mexico, and by chance he happened to show it laughingly that evening to a newspaper man. The newspaper man liked it so well that he telephoned it to his office. There, one of the great telegraphic agency representatives read it and chuckled, and because news was slack this particular evening he put it on the telegraph wires to newspapers the world over, which, of course, brought it right back to the morning papers in Ben Merrifield's own home city. Papers love nothing better than a little "feature" of cleverness or oddity with which to brighten their front pages, and so Mr. Merrifield saw his—or Tempe Hyde's—little verse staring at him from the paper next morning, and was astonished thereby.

He didn't realize it at the moment, but that was the beginning of a revival of interest in whatever Mr. Merrifield did, or whatever happened at his fine old mansion.

Frostburg Elks Will Stage Three Day Celebration, May 17-19

Making Plans For B. P. O. Elks Home Opening

Souvenir Booklet Will Be Feature of Fine Program

Frostburg, May 9 — Plans for the official opening of the new home of Frostburg Lodge, No. 470, B. P. O. Elks Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 17, 18 and 19, will be completed this week. Arrangements are being made to entertain visiting Elks from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia.

Rooming facilities for the visitors will be arranged by a committee consisting of Frank R. Keene, Richard Holben and Benjamin Huntsman.

The program, although not completed, will include a reception Friday afternoon and evening, trips to various points of interest in the county on Saturday and an impressive ceremonial at the new home Sunday. The reception for the visitors will be in charge of a committee consisting of J. William Ritz, James S. Davis, Calvin A. Holben, Dilmond M. James, Robert Lemmert, DeWayne McAtee, William Davis, Earl Weishaur, W. E. G. Hitchins and John Stewart.

The entertainment committee, consisting of Dr. W. O. McLane, John Durst, Joseph Lyons, Chester Stewart and John Keller, will meet this week to put the finishing touches on their part of the program. This committee will provide professional entertainers and make plans for a buffet luncheon in connection with the various social functions in connection with the opening.

The publicity committee, consisting of Upton B. F. Edwards, Randolph Nickel, Charles Dillon and William W. Sluss, has compiled a souvenir program in the form of a booklet of fifty pages which will contain the complete program and interesting information concerning the lodge from the date of its inception to the present time.

A "general information" committee, consisting of John L. Casey, A. Charles Stewart, William Lemmert and Joseph Condon, will assist the other committees with all the plans being arranged for the three days of the opening.

The new home is being further improved this week by the construction of a new poolroom in the basement. The room, fully equipped, will be ready for the opening. The upper floors, completely furnished several months ago, will be given a house cleaning this week and the grounds around the building will be groomed and placed in tip top shape for the inspection of the grand lodge officers and other members of the fraternity who will be here for the opening.

Garrett County Schools Promoting an "Art Week"

Oakland, May 9—Garrett county is initiating an "art week" of its own.

For the first time, rural and graded elementary school children of Garrett county will exhibit their art work. Beginning week May 13 art exhibitions will be held at Red House, Oakland and Kitzmiller.

Work in these exhibitions has been selected as a result of a broadened art program in the county schools during the past year. Four hundred examples of school art including crayon, water color, charcoal and craftwork will be shown.

The art shows will be held at the following centers:

Red House, Monday, May 13, afternoon and night. Oakland, Tuesday, May 14, night; Wednesday, May 15, morning, Kitzmiller, Thursday, May 16, afternoon.

Program will consist of musical selections, talks by Mrs. Caroline Wilson, Miss Catherine Baker, and F. E. Rathbun, county superintendent of schools; cartoon drawing by high school students and selections by elementary school pupils.

The new art program has endeavored to encourage creative ability in art rather than imitation. The pieces to be shown reflect this to an amazing degree. This, plus the fact that there are so many schools represented, make it certain that this exhibition will be educational and entertaining. Lack of a museum in this vicinity will make such opportunities valuable to the public.

This work has been accomplished through the cooperation of the teachers with Mrs. Caroline Wilson, supervising teacher, and Miss Catherine Baker, special art teacher.

New Oakland Company Will Employ Seventy

Will Make Staves and Other Forest Products

Oakland, Md., May 9 — The Oakland Lumber Company, a new concern here that will employ approximately 70 men when geared to full capacity, is now operating in Oakland.

For the past week the company has been employing about twenty men at the mill and on the timber tract recently purchased, according to James Merriken, manager. The chief operation by the concern will be the manufacture of staves, but other forest products will also be manufactured, it was stated.

The company recently purchased certain timber on the Herrington Manor tract through an arrangement with the State Forestry Department and the probabilities are that the operations by the lumbering concern will last for a period of five years or possibly longer.

The mill is located along the Baltimore and Ohio tracks just west of town, and near Washington spring crossing where lumber and staves are to be manufactured. The machinery for making staves is expected within a few days. Mr. Merriken said the company would also accept logs from any individual having them for sale. Oak timber is used mainly in the manufacture of staves. Mr. Merriken has an office in the Garrett National Bank building.

New Garage

Practically all excavation work was completed yesterday for the new garage to be erected by Ralph Pritts on Liberty street. The building will be of concrete blocks with a brick front and will be modern in design, according to present plans. It will have a frontage on Liberty street of 70 feet, running back 150 feet to the alley, and an L-shaped addition in rear of 50 feet by 60 feet, making a frontage of 120 feet along the alley.

The use of steel girders in construction will eliminate the need of supporting posts within the garage itself and will allow ample room for working and storage space. Construction will not begin for two weeks or more, pending awarding of contracts.

Sidewalks Replaced

Portions of the sidewalks in the business district, Second and Elder streets, are being replaced with concrete walks and curbs, through a project with the WPA and an arrangement with property owners. The work began this week and will take about three weeks to complete, according to James Pollock, local representative for WPA.

Property owners have agreed to furnish material needed while the WPA will furnish labor and the concrete mixer. The east side of Second street, between Green and Alder, and the north side of Alder from the First National Bank to the Treacy property are being improved at present and when this portion is improved other parts of the street will be torn up and improved.

It is the present plan of the Mayor and City Council to widen the streets four feet and make the sidewalks on each side of the street two feet narrower.

The sidewalks will be constructed of concrete, replacing the brick sidewalks that have been down for a number of years, which have become uneven and at some places even dangerous. About ten men are employed on the project.

"It All Came True" tells the story of a group of people who live in a New York boarding house run by two sentimental old women, using it as a refuge where they can fight off the reality of the present and dwell in the fond memories of the past. The complacent atmosphere of the house is shattered when first Ann, daughter of one of the landladies, comes home to roost and again when the housekeeper's son, Jeffrey Lynn, returns home after an absence of five years, with a gangster who intends to use the house as a hideout. The gangster, played by Humphrey Bogart, is so won over by the motherly ministrations he receives that he offers to straighten out the financial difficulties of the boarding house by converting it into a night club with a "Gay Nineties" background.

Looking Your Best Takes Time

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH buttons gone into the limbo of forgotten things and zippers ever at hand, dressing is done in a jiffy. Too much of a jiffy, we think. It is the hurried dresser who has stray hairs on her shoulders, powder in patches, collar squeegee.

Take your time, particularly if you are making the big date, want to put the other girls' eyes out. Have a warm bath to lull your nervous system to sleep and to untense your muscles. Cream your face beforehand; the cream and the steam in the bathroom will give your complexion freshness and color.

Spare 10 minutes for a complete flop with cold compresses on your eyes. Not stingy little gauze pads, but a heavy washcloth. If the flesh around the soul orbs is swollen, cold water will deflate it.

Condition the complexion for make-up. You can use a foundation if you like—there are different forms for dry and oily skins—but be sure to follow directions precisely and exactly. Begin powdering at the collar bones, work upward, include the shoulders and the back of the neck. Use a magnifying mirror when tinting the lips and touching the lashes with mascara. Make-up is a fine art these days. The girl who splashes on the batik is committing a beauty crime.

Don't cut your finger-nails with manicure scissors; they will thicken and grow hard. Use a metal file, run the orange wood stick under the eave, use the beveling file of sandpaper.

Apply cuticle cream every night of your life, no matter how sleepy you may be. Your talons will be delicate and rosy, you'll never have a battle with a hangnail. Friction the nails to stimulate the underlying blood streams that give them coloring.

A nail white pencil is convenient. You can form a fine point by slipping it in your pencil sharpener. Dip it in water, pass it under the nail eaves, forming a clear-cut line.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PLATINUM blondes are doing the disappearing act. You don't see many of them any more. The reason? Poor tresses go all to pot, get dried out and look terrible. That is, unless one has expert professional treatment. Even then the silky shafts may suffer and go into a decline.

White henna is the medium used, and that's a joke. There's no such thing. Peroxide and ammonia are combined, in proper proportions, with magnesium carbonate to form a paste which is applied quickly and evenly to the silky mop. Now and then a little is scraped away to see how the bleaching is progressing. The hair is shampooed and a lemon rinse follows.

To attain the white-gold shade, the hair must be bleached to the limit. If the operator goes beyond the limit, the hair shafts lose glitter and life. They break at a touch of the comb. Just why a girl with golden hair should want to look as if she had gone grey, we don't know.

For a time the fad had wide popularity. Then the results showed up. Some of the "plats" had their hair dyed a pretty chestnut shade. Some just endured the transition period, which is pretty terrible, the hair being darker and of different shades near the scalp.

Sore, sensitive spots on the inner surfaces of the gums may be due to some substance caught between the teeth or wedged under the gum. Our favorite dentist tells us he is always treating unhappy patients who have particles of popcorn stored away to cause discomfort. Sometime he digs out pieces of nuts, even raisin stems.

If soreness is prolonged, it is best to see a dentist, since an open wound invites infection. Rinsing the mouth with a salt solution is recommended. If foreign particles cling between the teeth and the brush will not remove them, use dental floss. But be gentle so as not to cause an abrasion of the flesh.

KATHRYN ADAMS . . . achieves a chic coiffure without aid of tinting.

Forget the Curbston

To youngsters who like to take the bit in their teeth, and go the limit while the flash of youth lasts, the foregoing doesn't apply. But if you're normal and want a little home of your own—husband, children—don't meet the boy friend on the curbstone week after week, month after month. Naturally, if his intentions are serious, he wants to know what kind of a family you come from. He'd like to meet mother and dad, and see how they compare with his own family.

N. B.: Dad! please don't utilize the occasion to hand out what you feel should be done about the war in Europe, conditions here at home, of even the weather, to Mary Jane's young man. Give the young people a chance!

Landlady Too Attentive

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My son under 21 years of age is bearding with a spinster nearly 50. Some friends of mine suggested this boarding place, thinking my boy would be well taken care of, and the spinster would look out for him in a kind, motherly fashion. Alas, she has, far too kind and motherly.

She calls him pet names, combs his hair, sits in his lap, and claims she is only mothering him.

At the same time she is turning him against his best friends, by false accusations. I think she is not only jealous of them, but is afraid of their influence, and is due an eye-opener from me if she doesn't stop her scheming ways.

Don't you think it would be better for him to move?

WORRYING MOTHER.

To my way of thinking, combing a lodger's hair, especially if he's one-half the landlady's age, seems taking an unfair advantage of a boy of 21, though most boys would be immune to such middle-aged attentions. If you can get him to move peaceably, don't you think it would be better to pass up what you call the "eye-opener?"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Six months ago I fell in love with a girl, and I can't seem to get up enough courage to tell her so. Now I want to write her. What should I say and how? I would like her to believe I can use words with a lot of expression and that I am highly educated. I've had about two or three dates a week with her, and I think she cares for me. Se is 20 and I am 24.

JACK.

I like your letter very much and that's why I'm using it. Men and women go to school, to colleges, to universities, and they travel extensively, all for the purpose of increasing their cultivation. They go through all kinds of changes in taste, beginning generally with what is called a "high falutin' style." But in the end they conclude, as do the really great writers and speakers of the world, that the best of all styles is found in simplest expressions. Read "Arabian Nights," the Holy Bible, all of the classics, in proof of this statement of mine.

Whatever your style, preserve in it, by all means, that simple, sincere personality that I find so charming in your letter.

Just Holds Her Close

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young man of 23 for about ten months, and in all this time he has never said anything about love. Sometimes when we are alone he will hold me close to him without saying a word. I wonder sometimes if there isn't someone else he is bounds to in some way. I love him so much.

I believe he thinks a great deal of me, but doesn't want to admit it. Is there any way I can make him love me? He is a fine young man and any girl would be proud to have him for a husband.

JANE.

It seems to me that you're making pretty fair progress with this young man, and if you don't try to "rush" him, you're likely to make even more. Very often boys are slower about falling in love than girls and they make haste more slowly in the matter of being demonstrative. A little patience on the part of a girl has kept many a likely lover from straying.

Prisoners Are Playful

Hinton, W. Va., May 9 (AP)—Prosecutor Thomas L. Read said he may have to use a lie detector to find out who inflicted painful burns on Josepht Hart, sixty-year-old transient who was injured as he slept in the county jail.

Somebody tied paper around Hart's foot, the prosecutor said, and set it afire. All the prisoners denied guilt.

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

THE CHARACTERS:
BENJAMIN MERRIFIELD, aged capitalist, hires
GAYLE DIXON to make love to his grandson,
JEREMY TUCKER, a shy student of archeology.

YESTERDAY: Gayle and Bill decide to establish a Little Theater in the Merrifield mansion.

Drawing Jeremy out of his shell was a part of Bill's duty.

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE FIRST meal Gayle Dixon had eaten in The Oaks was one of quiet, sun-gemmed beauty; natural luxury so profound that the excellent food itself was all but unnoticed. That had been breakfast, on the sun porch with Bill.

But dinner, at which she was quite unexpectedly coerced into the role of hostess, was an occasion of an altogether different sort. The very walls of the Merrifield mansion appeared to shout their pleasure at seeing youthful good times revived.

Gayle wisely decided that this dinner should be as natural and simple as her hurried supervision could make it. She avoided any formal note, partly because the trend of events seemed to be that way this evening, partly because The Oaks had been rather steeped in formality of late anyway, she realized. Mr. Merrifield's saying of grace was a beautiful touch. She had not expected it; indeed, she had simply not thought of it—to her shame.

"I want you to know, Mr. Merrifield, that yours was a very lovely prayer, and that asking a blessing at mealtime is a fine custom, I think." Gayle said that in all sincerity, looking at her employer and host.

"Check," echoed Bill Bailey. "I was trying to figure a way to say just that, sir. I—well, I—say, why are people embarrassed about asking a blessing, anyway?"

Mr. Merrifield turned to him in surprise. "I am not embarrassed, young sir."

But Bill was, anew. Tempe Hyde all but giggled, at him, and Gayle's eyes twinkled. Bill devoted himself earnestly to a fruit cocktail.

A moment later Mr. Merrifield spoke again.

"I feel that this is an auspicious evening. Isn't it pleasant, Mr. Weems? Isn't it, sir?"

"Oh, of course, sir. Yes, indeed. I was just thinking, how thoughtful of you to arrange a little party this way for Mr. Jeremy."

"Now that's something!" Bill spoke up.

A party! Why, sure, a little dinner surprise for Jeremy! That would account for the presence of all the girls, for Bill himself. Jeremy had looked wonderingly at them during the introductions before dinner. Bill looked quickly at Gayle now, and she nodded.

"You see, Jeremy, you hadn't been in town very long, and so your grandfather wanted you to meet some, uh, nice people your age, and all. We were lucky to be the ones, eh girls?"

The six picked up the cue nicely. In truth, they had felt a certain jittery restraint of their own—a wonderment at their astonishing employ. Now they could see a course and play it.

The talk mounted. Small, spontaneous talk. And laughter. Jeremy took little or no part in it mainly because he was shy and had no ready answers, no quick repartee. But his obvious brightness and interest were enough. It was his party. The actors played to him.

The cocktail was followed by a simple roast beef. Simple, that is, save for the huge size of it, and the extraordinary savor. It was mountainous before Mr. Merrifield, and its aroma was delicious. Little bubbles of suet still broiled audibly on its brown crust when it was set on the table. Mr. Merrifield liked to carve.

There were vegetables, celery hearts, two kinds of olives, sweet peach pickles of a kind Gayle had never tasted before, hot biscuits, coffee or tea. Chinaware was a Haviland dating well back into the last century, gold on white—priceless. Silver was old sterling. Linen was hand drawn—"done by a Mexican woman from one of the Merrifield mining towns in Arizona."

Mr. Weems explained when Gayle inquired. Dessert was a lemon-milk sherbet—a perfect tangy aftermath to a somewhat hearty meal. Wallace the cook had to be sent for so that he might hear the enthusiastic praise. Being quite human, he loved it.

"It is all so very fine," Gayle took the hostess reins again over the coffee cups, "that I think the banquet should have at least a few speeches. Nothing too serious, perhaps. But—nice. You know what I mean. Who will be first speaker?"

"I nominate Mr. Bailey."

"Mr. Weems."

"Mr. Merrifield."

"It's Jeremy's party. Why shouldn't he be the—"

"But I'm acting as hostess," Gayle interrupted the quick flow of suggestions, "and so I call on that well-known public speaker, Miss Tempe Hyde!"

Tempe turned pink even as she giggled, and the laughter grew in a crescendo around her. She ducked under a napkin. She tried to dodge under the table itself, but she was crowded rather close to Jeremy Tucker, who sat at Gayle's right, and so could not find physical escape. Everybody else began applauding.

"I hate you, Gayle Dixon!" the smaller girl finally shrieked, "but I'll make a speech if Jeremy will. It's his party, not mine."

Jeremy turned out to be a gentleman. Somewhat solemnly he got to his feet, addressed the others formally, and did say a surprising three minutes of good words. He thanked them for their kindness in arranging this welcome. He spoke haltingly of friendship's value. Then he thanked Miss Dixon and sat down. A harmless, colorless speech.

The applause was polite, but the attention flew right back to Tempe. Still pink, she sat there in giggly misery.

"Called your bluff, Tempe, old kid!" Bill egged her on. "The floor's yours."

"Speech! Speech! Speech!"

She could not ignore the chorus now. "Whatever will I talk about? Oh, dear!"

"Something deep," Bill prompted. "Like—oh, science, war, economics."

Everybody laughed at that prospect. Tempe, pretty and dainty as a pom-pom, just didn't look profound. But she inhaled deeply and stood up—a good sport what ever the pain!

"I choose economics—I hope you'll forgive me, Mr. Merrifield, but here I go:

"There was a young man who
saved up for the future,
He put in his money bags all
he could spare.
But alas for the poor economical moocher—
The future arrived and the man wasn't there!"

There was an instant of silence. Tempe sat down, blushing at her temerity. Then the storm broke.

"HAW-W-W-W!" Mr. Merrifield led it with an outburst surprisingly basso for his age. He banged the table so that dishes jumped. Graham, the butler, hastened back to the room in some alarm.

During the laughter the two old men arose, and when the spontaneous talk had subsided again everybody was back at the piano. If Bill Bailey had guided them there without their realizing it, no matter. He saw that Jeremy Tucker had broken his ascetic countenance with an actual smile; drawing Jeremy out of his shell was a part of Bill's duty.

Gayle began playing again, softly because Mr. Merrifield had cornered Tempe Hyde and was making her teach him the funny little poem on economy. He repeated it twice. When he could say it all through, he turned from her.

"Mr. Weems!" he bellowed. "Take some telegrams—haw!"

"Telegrams, sir? Did we overlook—"

Poor Mr. Weems was proud of his efficiency as the Merrifield business secretary. His consternation showed suddenly.

"Certainly, Mr. Weems! Is your hearing failing? I said telegrams. Telegrams, sir!"

"Oh, of course, sir!"

Within an hour Mr. Benjamin W. Merrifield had spent about $100 of his assets communicating with a dozen or so big business executives, some of them in far distant places, all of them famous for their financial strength. And each one of them chuckled appreciatively over an after-dinner speech heard that evening in the historic Merrifield mansion.

Oddly enough, one of the men who received the little rhyme was in Mexico City, Mexico, and by chance he happened to show it laughingly that evening to a newspaper man. The newspaper man liked it so well that he telephoned it to his office. There, one of the great telegraphic agency representatives read it and chuckled, and because news was slack this particular evening he put it on the telegraph wires to newspapers the world over, which, of course, brought it right back to the morning papers in Ben Merrifield's own home city. Papers love nothing better than a little "feature" of cleverness or oddity with which to brighten their front pages, and so Mr. Merrifield saw his—or Tempe Hyde's—little verse staring at him from the paper next morning, and was astonished thereby.

He didn't realize it at the moment, but that was the beginning of a revival of interest in whatever Mr. Merrifield did, or whatever happened at his fine old mansion.

Portland, Ore. — Oregon Democrats will have a choice between President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner at the presidential primaries May 17.

Oregon Republicans will vote for Senator Charles N. McNary, veteran minority leader and the party's only candidate for the 10-delegate state.

Sen Martin.

No other Republican — although Thomas E. Dewey visited the state and soundings have been made for Senator Taft and others—cared to risk prestige in the home fortress of the senior Oregon senator.

So the primaries are really a Democratic show. General Charles H. Martin, 76-year-old ex-governor, who speaks in the crisp language of the barracks and parade ground, provides the "oomph." He clashed with the administration two years ago on Bonneville dam and public power, relief, appropriations and labor, losing the support of Oregon unions and Roosevelt spokesmen and thereby the governorship.

Since then he has advocated Garner as the rescuer of old time democracy.

The Oregon Commonwealth Federation, which helped oust Martin in the 1938 gubernatorial primary, circulated petitions to enter President Roosevelt in the primary.

The Oregon primary law exacts this pledge from each delegate: "I will use my best efforts to bring about the nomination of those persons for President and vice-president of the United States who receive the largest number of votes at the primary elections."

Sen. McNary

There are no vice-presidential candidates.

If Oregon endorses a third term but the President doesn't make the race, the delegates are free to follow whom they please.

McNary, who does not vigorously pursue his candidacy, asserted willingness to run chiefly in the interest of the farm element. If his candidacy falters—though many westerners say his convention strength will be greater than generally believed—his recommendations will be an influence in determining where the delegation will place its support next.

Tomorrow: New Jersey.

Good Start

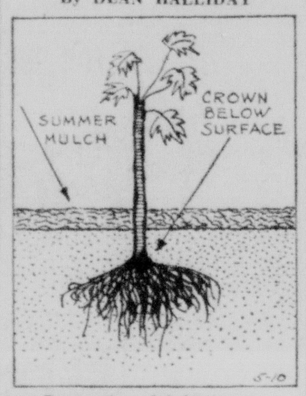
Helena, Mont. (AP) — What would you have told her had you been in the shoes of a reporter who was asked by a recently arrived Italian miss to suggest some "American" words to learn?

She explained she had lived in Great Britain, had learned English fairly well, but was having trouble "Americanizing" it. She wanted to add five new words and phrases each day and fit them properly into her vocabulary so she could make Americans understand her.

The reporter suggested there were only a few phrases or words she needed to learn and keep repeating. He recommended: "Swell," "Lousy," "Of course," "Oh, nuts."

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY



Protecting delphiniums against drought

Delphiniums are very susceptible to injury from drought, therefore, whether the soil in which they are to be planted is light or heavy in texture it should be dug and turned to a considerable depth, and have humus added to it to keep it loose and friable and give it added moisture-retaining capacity.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, the young delphinium plants should be set firmly in the soil with the crown below the surface. This is important, since it helps to keep the new roots from drying out before the plant has become established.

The soil about delphinium plants should be lightly cultivated and then covered with a light, top dressing. By thus keeping the plants mulched it will discourage weed growth, keep the ground cool and thereby conserve the moisture in it for the use of the plants themselves.

Senate Committee Approves Judicial Review Measure

Washington, May 9 (AP)—The Logan-Walter bill to facilitate judicial review of government agencies has been approved by the Senate Judiciary committee with a recommendation that it be considered speedily.

Disregarding a plea by Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky that action be delayed, the committee reported the measure with what members called "perfecting" changes in the text previously approved by the House. Barkley had asked that the committee await the results of a justice department study before acting.

As approved by the House, the legislation not only would smooth the way for appeals from actions of departments, bureaus and agencies, but would permit interested parties to appeal to the courts against the establishment of regulations laid down by these boards.

COMING TO THE LIBERTY

"Aw, come on in" Humphrey Bogart pleads with Ann Sheridan, who seems to prefer to stay outside. Scene is from "It All Came True," which opens tomorrow at the New Liberty theater.

New York and Hollywood Studios—and his Hollywood Rhythm Band, direct from the Hollywood Restaurant in New York, are known as "show stoppers" and purveyors of the tops in good music and entertainment. Artie Dann, Broadway comic; Sonny and Shirley Dall, Modern Rhythm Dancers, and a host of other stars complete the "Swingaroo Revue" presentation.

On the screen will be Richard Cromwell and Helen Vinson in "Enemy Agent."

Another kiddie party will be held tomorrow morning with the doors opening at 9:30 and the show starting promptly at 10 a. m. There will be four Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck color cartoons, sports reels, comedies and feature picture and the Stepin Fetchit show. Every kiddie attending will receive gifts .

Two Pictures Are Offered at Garden

Boris Karloff is starred in "The Man They Could Not Hang," at the Garden theater.

Also on the Garden program is "Valley of the Giants," starring Claire Trevor and Wayne Morris.

Ann Sheridan Stars In Liberty Film

The New Liberty theater's next attraction, opening tomorrow, will be "It All Came True," based on the Louis Bromfield novel and starring Ann Sheridan, who has become Hollywood's most outstanding feminine personality.

Playing one of the most delightful characters ever created by Louis "Rains Came" Bromfield, Ann sings, does the rhumba and "hangs one" on the jaw of a would-be talent scout.

"It All Came True" tells the story of a group of people who live in a New York boarding house run by two sentimental old women, using it as a refuge where they can fight off the reality of the present and dwell in the fond memories of the past. The complacent atmosphere of the house is shattered when first Ann, daughter of one of the landladies, comes home to roost and again when the housekeeper's son, Jeffrey Lynn, returns home after an absence of five years, with a gangster who intends to use the house as a hideout. The gangster, played by Humphrey Bogart, is so won over by the motherly ministrations he receives that he offers to straighten out the financial difficulties of the boarding house by converting it into a night club with a "Gay Nineties" background.

Texas Girl Appears In Embassy Picture

Suzan Dale, now appearing in Monogram's "Rhythm of the Rio Grande," Tex Ritter starring film at the Embassy, is a Texas girl, and for five years has been a stage actress in the southwest. She played starring roles in "Our Town," "Three Cornered Moon," and "She loves Me Not." Between shows she appeared on radio shows and sang with dance orchestras.

Miss Dale went to Hollywood after she won the famed "Gateway to Hollywood" contest for the Southwest. She made her radio bow on the Lux Radio theater. Paramount studios signed her for an important role in "Comin' Round the Mountain."

"Rhythm of the Rio Grande" is the story of a hidden gold mine, and its mysterious curse. Outstanding in the card are Frank Mitchell, Martin Garralaga, Forrest Taylor, and Glen Strange.

The second feature on the program is "Troopship," starring Leslie Banks and Flora Robson.

William Essex, the great novelist, has lone everything humanely possible to make life beautiful and secure for his only son, Oliver. When regeneration comes, it is almost too late.

Stepin Fetchit Comes To the Strand Today

Stepin Fetchit, just returned from a sixteen weeks tour with the Shubert Show, "Three After Three", in which he played a stellar role, has surrounded himself with the pick of Broadway, Hollywood and Harlem's stars, and comes to the Strand today and tomorrow with his "Swingaroo" Revue."

Fetchit, whose droll humor, lazy mannerisms and flare for pantomime have made him the favorite comic of countless movie fans, will be heard and seen in some of the comedy situations which have made him one of the stage and screen's greatest laugh getters. Many Fetchit admirers will remember him for his character parts with the late Will Rogers and more recently in several of cinema-land's successful collegiate musical pictures.

Featured with Stepin Fetchit in his "Swingaroo Revue" is dusky Abdul Sender, from the banks of the river Nile, whose sensational key-board jitter-bugging, leads one to believe that the Egyptians had a word for swing, too. Jerry Blaine—a former movie bit-player, from

Eight Starters Forecast for $50,000 Race

Followers Confused by too Much Information for Preakness Stakes

By MASON BRUNSON

Baltimore, May 9 (AP)—One sunny afternoon at the Pimlico race track, an overstuffed, exasperated individual slammed his program down and wailed:

"There's more—tips around this place than in a can of asparagus."

His ire was vented, of course, at the numerous "tips" that circulated on various horses at any race track. Just as this rotund fellow was befuddled by too much "information," so was the picture for Saturday's running of the $50,000—added Preakness Stakes clouded with some uncertainty tonight.

Doubtful Factors

Doubtful factors included this size of the starting field, the probable favorite and the weather.

Tonight it appeared likely that only eight three-year olds would be entered tomorrow for the Preakness' golden jubilee running, although there was an outside chance of one or two more being named at the last minute.

As for the probable favorite, the choice apparently lay between Gallahadion, Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Kentucky Derby winner, and Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, the runner-up.

Four other horses beaten in the Derby were considered sure Preakness starters. They were Arnold Hanger's Dit, C. S. Howard's Mioland, Tower Stable's Royal Man and W. L. Brann's Pictor.

The other two likely entries are Milsdale stable's Andy K and Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance. Mrs. E. G. Lewis' Jacomar, who had been expected to start, will not enter. Trainer Alex B. Gordon said Jacomar had been injured in a stall spill.

Only four others were given any chance at all of going to the post. These outside possibilities are Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Snow Ridge, Mrs. Anthony Pelleteri's Sun Pharos, J. W. Y. Martin's Abrasion and D. A. Firestone's Marogay.

Expect Fast Track

An overnight rain made the race strip muddy during the workout hours this morning. It was wet and chilly and scenes around the track were reminiscent of the rain-swept Preaknesses of 1938 and 1939.

It cleared up before noon, however, and the fast-drying track was only slightly heavy by post time for the first race. A little rain was what the track needed. After a week of sunny weather it was a little too powdery.

4 Million See Irish Gridders During 1930's

Notre Dame — The Irish of Notre Dame, perhaps the nation's greatest gridiron attraction, have played to more than 4,500,000 spectators during the last decade.

When the late Knute Rockne became coaching the Irish 20-odd years ago the seating capacity at Notre Dame's gridiron — when temporary bleachers were provided — was 2,000. Last season 56,000 saw the Notre Dame-Southern Claifornia game. Five of Notre Dame's home games last year was sell-outs, the top crowd — 80,000—saw the game with the Navy at Cleveland.

There are many major teams which don't draw more than 200,000 in a season but crowds of 358,000 would better have seen the Irish each season of the past decade. The all-time high for Notre Dame was 560,000 of 1929.

The game with Army in New York is an annual sell-out.

Pirates Send Mueller To Rochester

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP)—The Pittsburg Pirates today sent Catcher Ray Mueller to Rochester of the International League under a five-day option. His release, along with that earlier in the day of Pitcher John Gee, brought the Pirate squad down to twenty-seven players. Gee was sent to Syracuse of the International subject to twenty-four hour recall.

When Praising Gallahadion Don't Forget Sir Gallahad III

AP Feature Service

Louisville — Gallahadion's triumph in the Kentucky Derby added further prestige to old Sir Gallahad III, the French-bred stallion which arrived in this country in 1925.

During the last ten years colts and fillies, carrying his blood, have figured prominently in all the rich stakes in the land, including the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes. Each year either Sir Gallahad III or one of his sons or daughters has a winning juvenile or three-year-old.

Among the children and grandchildren of Sir Gallahad III are Gallant Fox, Johnstown, Omaha, Challedon, Fighting Fox, Granville, Gallant Sir, High Quest, Pasteurized, Sir Damion and Tintagel.

Gallahadion is the latest of his descendants to win the Derby. His other son was Gallant Fox, who won in 1930. Three grandsons have won: Omaha, by Gallant Fox, in 1935; Lawrin, by his son Insco, in 1938; and Johnstown, by his daughter Laura Gal, last year.

The same success is found in the Belmont. Gallant Fox, Omaha, Granville, Pasteurized and Johnstown won. Four of his descendants won the Preakness: Gallant Fox in 1930; High Quest in 1934; Omaha in 1935 and Challedon last year.

In 1930, 1933 and 1934 Sir Gallahad III was the leading American sire. His progeny established a record in 1930 by earning $422,200.

Feller Shuts Out Yanks with Three Hits

Indians Ace Hurled No-Hit Ball for Six Innings; Score 4 to 0

New York, May 9 (AP)—Bob Feller made a gesture toward a second no-hit game today and scared the World Champion Yankees into their sixth successive defeat as the Cleveland Indians finished their Eastern swing with a 4 to 0 victory.

At the finish Feller had given three hits, but for six innings he held the bombers helpless with his fireball and the 14,790 fans were just beginning to get a threb in their throats when Joe DiMaggio singled off shortstop Lou Bordreau's glove in the seventh.

This removed the tension and Joe Gordon singled sharply past first base in the eighth and in the ninth Charley Keller rapped another single to center. Keller, however, was the only Yankee to get as far as second base.

Feller's fast one was at its sizzling best as he proceeded to fan seven batters and allow only three walks.

His slugging teammates gave him plenty of help with a run in the second and three more in the fifth off Monte Pearson, who was the last man to pitch a no-hit game before Feller's show on opening day this season.

This was the twelfth defeat in eighteen games for the champions, now in last place, but was only the third to a right-hand pitcher.

Odds Favor Lou Ambers In Fight With Jenkins

By JOHN LARDNER

New York, May 9—The world is not big enough for two world's lightweight champions, and Lou Ambers, recognized in New York, Europe and Asia, intends to smack down Sammy Angott, who is hard to recognize at all without a white carnation in his buttonhole, as soon as possible.

But first Ambers has a chore to do. At Madison Square Garden this Friday evening he meets a famished Texan with umbrella ribs and a right hand like a mallet—name of Lew Jenkins, out of Sweetwater.

The odds are tolerably high in favor of Ambers, but Jenkins can make it interesting if he whacks Luigi just south of the lips. The Texan is quite a puncher.

Naturally, the world's lightweight championship of Europe, Asia and New York is all Jenkins's if he wins, and I understand that the House of Commons will hang around a radio in London all night if necessary, to learn which boy is champion of bucks . . . barks . . . wits . . . hants . . . and salops.

N. B. A. Cut Ambers Loose

Ambers was the world's champion of everywhere up until a week ago, when, you will recall, the National Boxing Association cut him loose from forty-six states and the Isthmus of Panama by proclamation in fee simple.

The N. B. A. awarded the world's championship to Mr. Angott for his dazzling victory over Davey Day. It dazzled Davey, if no one else, and Angott is now one of the only two living world's lightweight champions. He will continue in this capacity till he meets Ambers, an event which Samuel should postpone as long as possible if he likes the cooking up there on top.

Meanwhile, Ambers is the practical world's champion, and his challenger is Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater, Tex. There are three things in Mr. Jenkins's favor, namely.

1. He is managed by Hymie Caplin.

2. He can hit with his right.

3. He is hungry.

I do not remember a hungrier-looking fighter than the scourge of Sweetwater in the last ten years. His ribs are visible to the naked eye at a mile and a half, when he takes off his shirt (which is visible to the naked eye at two miles). His knees are bony, his cheeks are hollow, and his stomach is empty. When Mr. Caplin first assumed the management of this frustrated trencherman, he tried to reassure him.

Right Hand Is Lew's Fortune

"What do you care about the rest of you, Pally," said Mr. Caplin, "so long as you got your right hand?"

"If I had a bottle of ketchup," Mr. Jenkins replied, "I would of eat my right hand long ago."

That would have been a bad mistake, aside from the risk of indigestion, because Lew's right hand is his fortune. He has won twelve fights in a row in this locality, nine of them, I believe, by knockouts.

He studied to be a blacksmith, but he never got far beneath the spreading chestnut tree because horses are scarce and because he looked too hungry to please the owners of what horses there are. Glancing at Lew, and then at the horse, and then at the knife and fork on Lew's bare table, the average customer backed hastily away, taking his steed with him.

Things were so slow in the natty footwear game that Mr. Jenkins had to box for his breakfast. He soon learned the trick of knocking them over, but in spite of his success to date he is still hungry. Ambers, on the other hand, is full of home-cooked scollopini. It may make a difference.

"As soon as you have win this fight and the title," Mr. Hymie Caplin assures his protege, "everything will be dekkis-de-kekkis" (a Caplin coinage) "and you will eat all you can hold, on the contrary, but notwithstanding."

"All right," say Mr. Jenkins, who does not pay much attention to Hymie's double talk unless Mr. Caplin is telling him how to beat Ambers.

Mr. Caplin is positive that Jenkins will beat Ambers "from here to here." He may be right, but we will stick with Ambers until they carry him out of there, scollopini and all.

Dodgers Rally In Tenth To Defeat Cubs

Brooklyn Completes Western Trip with Four to One Victory

Chicago, May 9 (AP) — Brooklyn delightful Dodgers burst out with three runs in the tenth inning today to handcuff the Chicago Cubs 4 to 1 for their twelfth victory in fourteen games this season.

The score was tied at one all and two were out when the storm struck. Dixie Walker doubled, Cookie Lavagetto was purposely passed and then Dolph Camilli rapped a single into right field for a run, going to second himself on the throw in. Roy Cullenbine also was walked intentionally, filling the bases, and Peewee Reese shot a single into left to score two more runners.

That was the ball game that had started out as a red hot hurling battle between Tex Carleton, making his first start since his no-hitter, and Lefty French, winner of four games and defeated only once previously.

Walters Wins Fifth Straight For Cincinnati

Reds Ace Limits Boston Bees to Five Hits; Score Is 4 to 1

Cincinnati, May 9 (AP)—Bucky Walters' five-hit ball and good stickwork put the Reds back in the win column today with a 4 to 1 decision over Boston that gave the tall right-hander his fifth victory without defeat.

Striking out five and walking one, Walters yielded his first hit to Max West in the fourth and it went for the Bees' lone score, a home run.

Bucky and his shortstop, Eddie Joost, were stars of the day, each with a perfect day at the plate. Frank McCormick did his bit in the sixth, with his second circuit blow of the year.

In four times at bat, Walters bunt-singled, hung out a fifth-frame double that scored Joost from one of his three free trips to first, and twice worked walks for himself.

Joost singled his other time up and in the eighth inning, when the Reds for a third time loaded the bases, Lonnie Frey singled him home with one of the two final runs.

Portland, Ore. — Oregon Democrats will have a choice between President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner at the presidential primaries May 17.

Oregon Republicans will vote for Senator Charles N. McNary, veteran minority leader and the party's only candidate for the 10-delegate state.

Sen Martin.

No other Republican — although Thomas E. Dewey visited the state and soundings have been made for Senator Taft and others—cared to risk prestige in the home fortress of the senior Oregon senator.

So the primaries are really a Democratic show. General Charles H. Martin, 76-year-old ex-governor, who speaks in the crisp language of the barracks and parade ground, provides the "oomph." He clashed with the administration two years ago on Bonneville dam and public power, relief, appropriations and labor, losing the support of Oregon unions and Roosevelt spokesmen and thereby the governorship.

Since then he has advocated Garner as the rescuer of old time democracy.

The Oregon Commonwealth Federation, which helped oust Martin in the 1938 gubernatorial primary, circulated petitions to enter President Roosevelt in the primary.

The Oregon primary law exacts this pledge from each delegate: "I will use my best efforts to bring about the nomination of those persons for President and vice-president of the United States who receive the largest number of votes at the primary elections."

Sen. McNary

There are no vice-presidential candidates.

If Oregon endorses a third term but the President doesn't make the race, the delegates are free to follow whom they please.

McNary, who does not vigorously pursue his candidacy, asserted willingness to run chiefly in the interest of the farm element. If his candidacy falters—though many westerners say his convention strength will be greater than generally believed—his recommendations will be an influence in determining where the delegation will place its support next.

Tomorrow: New Jersey.

Good Start

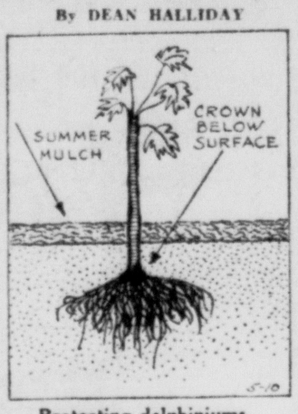
Helena, Mont. (AP) — What would you have told her had you been in the shoes of a reporter who was asked by a recently arrived Italian miss to suggest some "American" words to learn?

She explained she had lived in Great Britain, had learned English fairly well, but was having trouble "Americanizing" it. She wanted to add five new words and phrases each day and fit them properly into her vocabulary so she could make Americans understand her.

The reporter suggested there were only a few phrases or words she needed to learn and keep repeating. He recommended: "Swell." "Lousy." "Of course." "Oh, nuts."

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY



Protecting delphiniums against drought

Delphiniums are very susceptible to injury from drought, therefore, whether the soil in which they are to be planted is light or heavy in texture it should be dug and turned to a considerable depth, and have humus added to it to keep it loose and friable and give it added moisture-retaining capacity.

As shown in the Garden-Graph, the young delphinium plants should be set firmly in the soil with the crown below the surface. This is important, since it helps to keep the new roots from drying out before the plant has become established.

The soil about delphinium plants should be lightly cultivated and then covered with a light, top dressing. By thus keeping the plants mulched it will discourage weed growth, keep the ground cool and thereby conserve the moisture in it for the use of the plants themselves.

Senate Committee Approves Judicial Review Measure

Washington, May 9 (AP)—The Logan-Walter bill to facilitate judicial review of government agencies has been approved by the Senate Judiciary committee with a recommendation that it be considered speedily.

Disregarding a plea by Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky that action be delayed, the committee reported the measure with what members called "perfecting" changes in the text previously approved by the House. Barkley had asked that the committee await the results of a justice department study before acting.

As approved by the House, the legislation not only would smooth the way for appeals from actions of departments, bureaus and agencies, but would permit interested parties to appeal to the courts against the establishment of regulations laid down by these boards.

Red Sox Take Second Straight from Tigers

Boston Stretches Victory String to Four Straight; Score 6-5

Boston, May 9 (AP)—Pinch-hitter Johnny Peacock punched out a single with the bases loaded in the tenth today to give the Red Sox a 6-5 win over Detroit and a clean sweep of the two-game series.

While stretching their victory string to four straight, the league-leading sockers permitted the Tigers to come from behind and deadlock the game against starter Denny Galehouse in the seventh.

Thereupon rookie Herb Hash took over and kept the visitors under control until Peacock broke up the game.

After Joe Cronin registered the first Boston run in the fourth, Jimmy Foxx tripled with the bases jammed in the fifth and then scored on his manager's fly.

With one out in the tenth, Cronin smashed out his second two-bagger of the game and, after Doerr and Jim Tabor were passed by Alton Benton, the fourth Detroit flinger, Peacock rolled down the curtain while batting for catcher Gene Desautels.

St. Louis Downs Athletics 4 to 2

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP) — St. Louis took advantage of the wildness of pitcher Johnny Babich and, backed by Bob Harris' airtight pitching, turned back the Athletics, 4 to 2 before a Ladies Day crowd of 2,000 today.

Babich, undefeated in three previous starts, issued three walks and was nicked for two singles in the first inning to give the Brownies three runs and was yanked in favor of Herman Besse after walking the first batter to face him in the second. Meanwhile Harris scattered seven Athdetic hits and was airtight with men on base.

The Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

By GRANTLAND RICE

THE TWO HIGH SPOTS

There are two high spots over this weekend, starting Friday night. One involves a man—the other a horse. This includes a big portion of the sporting kingdom. The man is Lou Ambers, lightweight champion. The horse is Bimelech.

Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., won, lost and re-won the lightweight title. He needed a triple somersault. On Friday night at Madison Square Garden he must defend his crown against Lew Jenkins of Texas, a fellow who can really step out and fight.

On Saturday at Pimlico a horse by name of Bimelech, the 1-2 favorite beaten in the recent Kentucky Derby, must prove where he belongs in the Preakness.

Lou Ambers, the man, came back. Can Bimelech, the horse, come back against Gallahadion, his conqueror, and a flock of other stars which have a chance?

Lou Ambers, getting along in years and ring experience, must meet a young, tough, hungry entry who can supply the two main ingredients — he can give it and he can take it.

Ambers and Jenkins, without any thought of ballyhoo, should present one of the best lightweight contests in many years. For one reason, both are tough and both happen to like the subtle art of throwing leather.

The average fight, about ninety percent of all fights, might be called "the battle of bums." Most of contestants can't box a lick, or fight a lick. The ring game has degenerated into a scramble of incompetents. Outside of Joe Louis, Henry Armstrong, and Lou Ambers, the vast majority is 98 per cent ham.

Down at Pimlico

The Preakness at Pimlico on Saturday offers the most interesting situation the track has known in many years.

We came along to the Kentucky Derby. Bradley's Bimelech had won eight straight races. To owners and trainers he was "the unbeatable horse. I happen to know the others were all thinking in terms of second place.

There was also a horse by the name of Gallahadion. He had been beaten 14 times. He had won one major race. I had seen him beaten 15 lengths by Sweeplida, a third-class unknown. Bimelech had run Gallahadion's nose and feet into Kentucky dust five days before the big race. After that Gallahadion had to pick up 11 additional pounds.

In his two-and three-year career the Derby winner had shown nothing you could add up or photograph. He was just another horse — and not a good one. Maybe just another plow horse.

But Gallahadion won the Derby, over three seconds or ten lengths back of record time. He did a good job, his second good performance in over fifteen starts.

For example, Pictor, William Brann's main hope, started last and finished last in the most consistent no-good performance the Derby track has ever known. We all know Pictor isn't that bad, just as we all know Gallahadion isn't that good.

There Are Others

At this point you might recall the fact that Gallahadion and Bimelech are not the only horses who will be churning up the dust or mud of Maryland.

There will also be a horse called Dit. There will be another horse by the name of Mioland. There will be a horse by the name of Your Chance. There will be at least six horses with a chance under a warming spring sun which can make a deep difference. In addition to the above named we must also watch such horses as Carrier Pigeon and Flight Command. Maybe Pictor.

Bill Brann's horses can certainly hustle along over Maryland tracks. A year ago Johnstown beat Challedon at least eight lengths at Churchill Downs, and then Challedon came back at Pimlico to run away from the Big Flood. And over the same track Challedon took the full and complete measure of Kayak II.

So the Preakness, older than the Kentucky Derby, isn't a race dedicated to Bimelech and Gallahadion alone.

In my opinion, Bimelech is still the horse to beat. His record is a standout — eight wins out of nine starts and over $150,000 on the money-winning side. Bimelech is either not as great a horse as he looked to be or he caught a cuppy track he couldn't handle. This has happened to Seabiscuit, Kayak, and Johnstown, which were no mules.

More than a few trainers, including Maxie Hirsch, rated the track at Churchill Downs on the tricky side. It looked fast enough, but evidently it was not. There was a coat of shining crust that broke too quickly. There was a skid and a slip, which helped to make the race an open affair.

I happen to know that the owners of Dit and Mioland, also the two trainers, believe their horses can travel at a much faster pace over a normal track. All of which helps to churn up the situation and so baffle the bystanders even more.

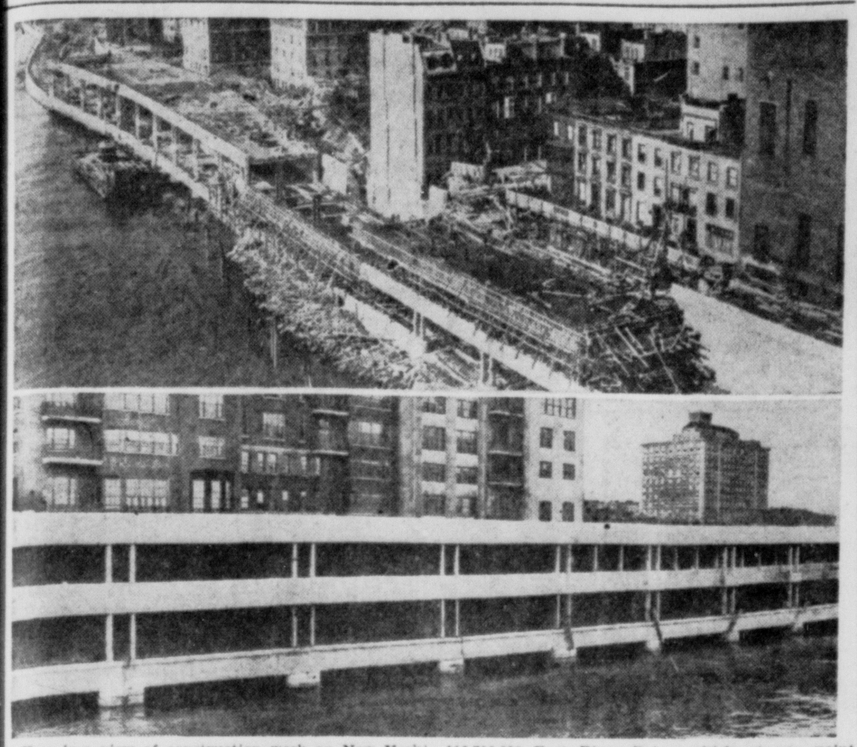
NEW YORK RUSHES TRIPLE-DECK HIGHWAY



Here is a view of construction work on New York's $10,700,000 East River Drive, which at one point becomes a triple-deck highway (lower), first project of its kind in the world. The lower lane will be for northbound express traffic, the second level for southbound, the upper level for local traffic. Work is to be completed before June 1. Thirteen men were injured recently by a cave-in.

Secret Bomb Sights Used by U. S. Army And Navy Praised

Washington, May 9 (AP)—Military authorities expressed the conviction that secret bomb sights used by United States Army and Navy planes were still the world's best in the face of Berlin reports that Nazi fliers had used in Norway a new device of comparable accuracy.

The German bomb sight was understood to be basically the same as Japanese fliers have used in China with results that have failed to impress American military airmen.

The American armed forces, by authoritative indications, have two bomb sights rather than the single device about which much secrecy has been thrown for years, one a naval development and the other perfected by a manufacturer of precision instruments.

Both are likely to remain as secret as they can be kept. The development of rival devices abroad was said authoritatively not to have altered the decision announced by President Roosevelt recently that devices rated secret by the army and navy would not be released for sale.

The bomb sights, complex mechanisms which automatically compute distance, wind resistance and other factors, have enabled army fliers to set impressive records for accuracy in practice near Langley Field, Virginia, and elsewhere. High scores have been set repeatedly in dropping actual explosives upon areas no larger than a battleship at altitudes of 18,000 feet and even higher.

The aiming mechanisms are portable and can be readily removed from planes to guarded storage places when not in use.

Germany Caulks Up Cork Leakage

Berlin (AP)—Cork now has fallen victim of stringent war economy in the Reich.

A nationwide order makes it obligatory for shop-owners selling bottled goods, such as wines, champagne, liquor, vinegar or any other bottled liquid requiring a stopper, to demand from the customer one used cork per bottle. The order was scheduled to go into effect May 15.

Restaurant proprietors were required to begin saving stoppers on May 1.

The cork thus collected will be cleansed and regenerated in factories to be used a second and perhaps many more times.

Appeals are addressed chiefly to German hausfraus, as mass consumers, to help the Fatherland by sparing it unnecessary expenditures in foreign currency. Cork is a raw material which Germany imported in large quantities.

Here Today, Gone Tomorrow

Tucson, Ariz. (AP)—Along with Villon, southwest farmers and scientists are asking, "Where are the snows of yesteryear?"

G. E. P. Smith, water engineer and University of Arizona scientist, declares "most of it was lost by sublimation."

"Such losses," he said, "are inevitable when the snowfall is followed by clear weather, cool or moderate, with normal or high winds."

To those who scoff at the problem of sublimation, Smith recalled "seeing wet clothes freeze dry on the line, and seeing a mist-like fog rising just above a snowy hillside."

Smith, who insists that forecasts of the water supply should be made each April and September in the Southwest to aid farmers to determine how many acres to plant, believes that a study of what became of the snows of yesteryear must be included in the forecasts.

Ambers Is Favored To Retain His Crown

Will Meet Lew Jenkins Tonight In New York

Puts His Crown on the Line against Fighter from Texas

By SID FEDER

New York, May 9 (AP)—Ever since Lou Ambers won the world lightweight championship the first time back in 1936, he has had the doubtful pleasure of tangling with punching specialists rather than less dangerous skilled boxers every time the chips were down.

And, now that he's getting along in years, so far as fistic experience is concerned, he's too old to change the habit at this stage of the game.

So he puts his crown on the line again tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden against another knocker-outer—Texas Lew Jenkins, a swatter from Sweetwater, who has disposed of his last three opponents in a total of five rounds.

Promoter Mike Jacobs figures the chances of a "kayo," plus Ambers' only recently-recognized ability as one of the classiest lightweights in years, should draw some 15,000 into the Garden to take in the show in which the Herkimer (N. Y.) Hurricane defends his title for the first time since he regained it from Henry Armstrong last August.

Despite Jenkins' right-hand cannon and left hook, this corner strings along with the twenty-six-year-old champion in this one, although there is the word that Ambers has had trouble making the weight, and that he may have to sacrifice some of his speed in getting down to 135 for the first time since he last faced Armstrong.

New York Wallops Pirates 17 to 6

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP)—In a travesty on baseball, the Pirates made seven errors and five of their pitchers gave up fifteen hits, ten bases on balls and hit three batsmen today in the process of collapsing in their ninth consecutive defeat 17 to 6 before the New York Giants.

Seven of the New Yorkers' runs were crammed into the first inning off Max Butcher and Dick Lanahan and the rout was on.

Carl Hubbell gave up a run to the Pittsburgh on two hits in the first, but thereafter allowed no hits until the seventh and even though the Pirates rallied for five runs in the last two frames, the veteran lefthander lasted till the final out. It was his first victory against two defeats.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, May 9 (AP) — It was fun while it lasted, anyway, so most of those ninety-one young ball players cut loose from Detroit by Commissioner Landis haven't any kick coming. The went up in a hurry and came down the same way, many of them with nice bonus checks in their pockets.

Interest in the fate of the free lancers has been centered on Benny McCoy and Roy Cunnenbine. Connie Mack rather hesitantly paid McCay $45,000 to sign, and the Dodgers gave up $25,000 to get Cullenbine, and right now it appears both players were worth their prices.

Little has been heard from the other eighty-nine players, and, with a few possible exceptions, little will be heard from them. Most of them are just old sailors. They've gone back to the C, or even D, after brief adventures in double A.

Many Bonuses Paid

When Landis made his proclamation there was an immediate rush by AA and even Major clubs to sign up these wandering minstrels. The reasoning was simple, to wit: The Tigers had signed them, so they must be good. Many a bonus was paid to some lad who never would sing in anything but the key of C.

The International League offers a fair cross-section of the past, present and future of this group of young men.

International League clubs acquired a total of fifteen of them, including two or three who were signed by a parent Major League club and put in the keeping of the farm. Only three remain on the roster, and four were unconditionally released. The other eight have been optioned out or sold to clubs of lesser classification.

The three among those present are Steve Rachunok, pitcher with Montreal who was with Henderson, Tex., last year; Dan Litwhiler, out of action last year and signed by the Phillies, and now optioned to Baltimore, and Dale Jones, with Lake Charles, La., last year and also now on option at Baltimore.

Rochester picked up four of the free agents. None is with the club now. Ed Bongard, not in pro ball last year, has been shipped to Cooleemee, N. C.; Ray Hart, pitcher with Fulton, Ky., last year, has been sent to New Orleans; John Fuller, another newcomer to pro ball, has been released outright, as has John Mandreger, who pitched in the Ohio State League in 1939.

Newark Takes Johnson

Newark took only John Johnson, with Toledo in 1939, and he also has been released unconditionally.

Montreal, Brooklyn's new farm, in addition to Steve Rachunok, acquired John Rachunok, Paul Gillespie and Alphonseus Sinomonis. John Rachunok, with Alexandria, La., last year, has been sent to Dayton, and from there to Grand Rapids. Sinomonis, with Fulton, Ky., in 1939, is with Elmira, as is Gillespie, a Lake Charles product.

All of which would indicate that ball players, like water, eventually will find their level. You can toss a bucket of water in the air and it will come down again, and you can toss a ball player into double A ball but that doesn't mean he'll stay there, even if he was signed by a Major League club originally.

Most of them were moved up too fast, but Landis gave them their chance, and look at the experience they got.

Boxing Show To Be Staged at Armory Tonight

Boxers from Four States Will Appear on Card Starting at 8:30

Boxers from Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Virginia will appear at the State Armory here tonight on the thirty-four round show sponsored by the Cumberland Athletic Club which will get under way at 8:30 o'clock.

The feature fighter on the card is "Tiger Red" Lewis, of Richmond, Virginia, light-heavyweight whose work is being praised by boxing experts in the east and south.

Lewis, who meets Ira Hughes, rugged Pittsburgh negro, in the top eight-rounder, entered 1940 with a record of 60 victories in 75 professional starts—and 1939 was his best year. He had one string of 15 consecutive victories, 11 of them by knockouts, and if he disposes of Hughes the C. A. C. impresarios are likely to bring him back at an early date to meet another tough battler.

District fans caught only a fleeting glance of Hughes when he gained a technical knockout over Charlie Brant, Somerset, Pa., scrapper, here several months ago, but they saw enough to become convinced that Hughes can take care of himself.

West Virginia's lone representative is that state's welterweight champion, Carl Turner of Fairmont, and he's down on the books to meet Charlie Burns, hustling Johnstown, Pa., jolter, who has survived rousing battles with Henry Armstrong, Lou Ambers and other glove greats without becoming punch drunk. Both Turner and Burns have fought here in recent months, the former decisioning Bill Niland in six rounds and the latter—handicapped at the time by a heavy chest cold—dropping a ten-round verdict to Ray Ingram of Washington.

Niland, gradually regaining the respect and admiration of district fans, moves up to the eight-round class, following a series of four and six-round appearances, against "Woody" Boord of Uniontown, Pa. Boord and Niland were amateur contemporaries for several years, but the former turned pro before Niland and has filled ten-round main bout bookings in Baltimore and other cities.

The clash between Western Maryland's new heavyweight king, Clarence "Kayo" Shrout, and Charlie Brant is supposed to go six heats, but most of the customers will be surprised if the bell rings for the third. Brant packs a lethal left and Shrout has developed a dynamite-laden right to score knockouts in three of his four professional scraps.

The shows four-round opener will bring together "Bucky" Walbert, of Cumberland, and Al Madero, of Frostburg, a couple of ambitious middleweights.

LEW'S MISSUS CHECKS UP

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Jenkins

Real manager of Lew Jenkins, Sweetwater, Tex., lightweight who meets Lou Ambers in New York, May 10, is none other than Lew's wife, Katie, who holds a second's license. Katie is shown with Lew prior to the bout.

Radbourne's Record

In 1884 Old Hoss Radburne pitched seventy-two games, won sixty and lost twelve. He pitched twenty-two in a row and won eighteen straight, five of them shutouts. No other pitcher ever won as many games in a single season.

Groh's Bottle Bat Style Still in Use

Louisville (AP) — A few baseball players still order a model of Heinie Groh's freak bottle-sized bat, says Henry Morrow of the Hillerich and Bradsby bat factory here. But he figures that only Groh could hit successfully with a bat of that type. Groh's bat weighed 34 ounces, was 40 inches long and 2¾ inches in diameter at the thickest part.

Edwards To Coach

Washington, D. C.—Albert "Turk" Edwards, star tackle on the Washington Redskins National Football League team for eight seasons, will act as assistant to Head Coach Ray Flaherty next season, Owner George P. Marshall announces.

Edwards succeeds Roy "Bullet" Baker, who resigned to devote all of his time to motion-picture technical work in Hollywood.

Brazil was discovered on May 3, 1500, by the Portuguese admiral Pedro Alvares Cabrel.

Senators Defeat Chicago 8 to 4

Washington, May 9 (AP)—Paced by the homers of Jimmy Bloodworth and Jimmy Pofahl, the Washington Senators today beat the Chicago White Sox 8-4. Dutch Leonard scattered ten hits to win his second victory of the year for Washington.

Chicago had a 3 to 1 lead until Pofahl socked his round-tripper in the sixth. The Sox got their runs scoring one in the third on three hits and an infield out, and two in the fifth.

Washington tied it up in the seventh when George Case doubled and tallied on Gerald Walker's single. Zeke Bonura then walked, Cecil Travis scored Walker with a single and Bloodworth drove Bonura and Travis across with his home run.

The Senators added another run in the eighth.

Jackson's War Club Popular in Texas

Louisville (AP) — Joe Jackson has been out of baseball for around two decades but a few of "Shoeless Joe's" model bats are still sold every year by the Hillerich and Bradsby bat factory. And, strangely enough, the sales of this bat are confined almost entirely to a South Texas area.

DICK TRACY—With the Greatest of Ease

Small Force of Nazis Surrounded By Allied Troops

Germans Near Narvik Reported in Precarious Position

Stockholm, May 9 (AP)—A small, grim force of Germans, with airplanes as its only means of supply, was reported in dispatches from the northern Swedish border tonight to be hanging to its positions about Narvik while British, French and Norwegians drew their encircling lines tighter.

German warplanes patrol the rugged mountainsides all but a few hours of the day bombing and strafing Allied patrols and gun positions and attacking Allied ships.

Planes Land Troops

The planes have succeeded in alighting on one glacier-lake mountain top near Narvik, according to one report, and in landing parachute troop reinforcements northeast of the port for an attack on the Allies' rear.

French Alpine chasseurs, working against terrific handicaps, are worming their way into advantageous positions up steep mountainsides, hauling their guns after them and trying to take cover when the German planes come over. Their job is to gain points from which they can shell out the German machine-gun nests.

In this arctic war scene, amidst recurring snow storms, the Germans' chances of holding on are diminishing, experienced observers say.

Germans Encircled

To the north of the snow-covered mountain, penetrated by tunnels through which Swedish ore trains once rolled down hill to Narvik port, the Germans are said to be well encircled.

Meanwhile, the attempt of the Germans to reinforce their Narvik garrison of 3,000 to 4,000 men by a tremendously difficult march overland across mountains and around rocky fjords from Trondheim, 400 miles south, was reported stalled after moving 150 miles.

Howard C. Hopson Under Indictment

New York, May 9 (AP) — Howard C. Hopson, master financier who ran an investment of a few thousand dollars up to control of a billion dollar utility empire, was indicted by a federal grand jury today on charges of taking illegal profits of more than $20,000,000.

Indicted with him were two lawyers and a former investment banker for his now bankrupt Associated Gas and Electric System, charged with assisting him in his operations. The indictment accuses the four men of fraudulent use of the mails on eighteen counts, and of conspiracy.

Prosecutors said this was the first time lawyers and bankers charged with having prepared the set up for a "gigantic mail fraud" had ever been indicted along with the principal defendant.

The lawyers named are Charles M. Trevis and Garrett A. Brownback, and the former banker, Frederick S. Burroughs, once with the now defunct investment firm of Harris Forbes & Co., and since 1932 an officer of Associated.

The indictment of the 58-year old Hopson, one of the most spectacular of public utility titans during the rapid growth of superpower corporations during the 20's, brings to a climax a series of conflicts with the government.

The health of the short, heavy, bald financier, whose capacity for work had become almost a legend among utility men, finally broke, and in October, 1935, it was announced he had resigned all his offices with Associated companies, while retaining his interest.

being rumored in Paris, an echo of the London crisis, and as the Whitsuntide holidays were approaching.

Almost simultaneously with Germany's move against the low countries, Britain announced she was taking under her protective custody the island of Iceland, united to Denmark by the kingship of Christian X.

Britain said her forces had landed to prevent the island's seizure by Germany. A number of Germans are reported to have infiltrated into the little country.

The British said "explicit guarantees" already had been given that the British landing force would withdraw at conclusion of the war.

tence brought only words that reflected caution when Il Duce made his fourth appearance on the balcony, smilingly shook his head and placed a finger on his lips.

"After my speeches, you must become accustomed also to my silence," he said. "Only facts will break it."

He had previously lauded the triumphal date of May 9, 1936, marking the declaration of the Italian empire, as "a great day in the history of our country."

While Mussolini clearly indicated that Italy's attitude remains unchanged for the present, a Swiss report that Great Britain and France had offered protection to Yugoslavia brought a warning in one Fascist newspaper that such a guarantee might mean war.

Will Protect Yugoslavia

The Bologna newspaper Resto Del Carlino said Italy and Germany would never accept a "violation" of Yugoslavia's neutrality which would be considered treason toward the Rome-Berlin axis.

Genoa shipbuilders reported Italy was rushing its naval preparations, with the "super battleship" Roma ready for launching after being built in a year and a half.

Pope Pius XII, according to Vatican circles, discussed the Yugoslav situation with Archbishop Louis Stepinac of Zagreb in a private audience. The pontiff had called the archbishops specially to the Vatican.

man people and its government," said Hitler in an order to his military commander in Norway, general Nicolaus von Falkenhorst. "King Haakon and his cabinet urged war against Germany."

He further tried to put Haakon and his cabinet on the spot by naming as one condition for according freedom to Norwegian professional soldiers that the "former Norwegian government withdraw its appeal to fight against Germany."

There was no indication as to how many captives might be involved.

Hitler's order came on a day when the high command's communique was one of the shortest in recent weeks. No major action was recorded and even the daily elucidation by DNB, the German news agency, said the "military position in Norway underwent no essential change."

Kilgore Attacks Kump on Record

Repeats Charge He Once Represented Insurance Interests

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 9. (AP)—Judge Harley M. Kilgore, renewing his criticism of former governor H. G. Kump tonight, referred to a previous charge that Kump "had represented certain insurance interests as a lobbyist during the last session of the legislature."

"Now Kump denies this," said Kilgore, stating that he didn't represent any insurance corporations. All that he represented was insurance agents."

Kilgore said the efforts of his opponent for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate were designed "to prevent passage of a bill which would save the citizens of this state over a million dollars annually in fire insurance premiums."

The Beckley jurist referred again to statements made by others that Kump represented the Belmont Brewing Company, and said the concern was prohibited from doing business in this state until "Kump entered the picture and for a fee of $3,000 he was able to convince the tax commissioner's office that the Belmont Brewing products should be allowed to be distributed and sold in this state."

(Kump, also speaking at Clarksburg, made reference to criticism of Van A. Bittner concerning his legal service for the same concern and said he was acting upon orders of a U. S. Court in the case and his role was that of an attorney representing creditors of the brewing company in a liquidation proceeding).

Kilgore charged also that "Kump busy trying to deny that he has any statehouse support in this current campaign and that he is strictly on his own."

Embargo on Rumanian Oil for Germany

Bucharest, Rumania, May 9 (AP)—The Rumanian government tonight put an embargo on exportating vegetable otis, most of which go to Germany.

Kump Speaks at Clarksburg Rally

Addresses CIO Leaders Who Are Opposed to His Nomination

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 9 (AP) — Former Governor H. G. Kump, referring in an address to CIO leaders who oppose him for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senate, termed as "diabolical" tonight threats to withdraw support from Democratic nominees who do not "sell themselves."

Kump, backed by the statehouse faction of the party, spoke at one political rally while another was addressed by Judge Harley M. Kilgore, who has the support of the CIO and the party's federal faction.

"Let these individuals be admonished now that there are patriotic citizens in West Virginia who will never yield to seeing their state government turned over to men who have no regard for the rights of others, and who think only of their own greed and selfish ambitions.

"Indeed, these individuals are willing even to barter the integrity of their government and the rights of all the people to satisfy their own lust for power and class domination."

Van A. Bittner, president of United Mine Workers District 17, said this week that if Kump were nominated for Senate and State Chairman R. Carl Andrews for governor, he would not vote for them nor would he ask his people to do so.

Kump said that charges of corruption and fraud in the May 14 primary "Come with poor grace from the source and the manner that they are made."

"The people of our state quickly distinguish the true from the false," he added. "They know the difference between balderdash and billingsgate upon the one hand and honest, fearless statement of facts upon the other. They are seeking the facts."

German Bombers Over the Thames

London, May 10 (Friday) (AP)—British anti-aircraft batteries went into action early today at several points on the Thames estuary when five planes, believed to be Heinkel bombers, were seen flying in an easterly direction.

Flashes of bursting shells were plainly visible to thousands of persons in townships near the river who were awakened by sounds of the guns. The planes were flying at an altitude of about 10,000 feet.

"The government has recognized there might be dangers from would-be fifth columnists at home," he went on, and had made twenty-one arrests in one drive, including a Nationalist Socialist member of Parliament and several Communists.

Ayer Newspaper Cup Awarded to New York Times

Selection Made for General Excellence in Typography

Philadelphia, May 9 (AP)—Award of the F. Wayland Ayer cup for excellence in newspaper typography for 1940 to the New York Times was announced today by N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc.

The award, made annually since 1931 in connection with an exhibition, was based on typography, make-up and presswork, without regard to the editorial content of the papers. All pages, including those inside, were considered by the judges. The judging was based on editions of March 19.

The New York Times previously won the cup in 1933 and 1935. Other winners have been the New York Herald Tribune, four times; the Hartford Courant; the Los Angeles Times and The Newark Evening News.

Honorable mentions were awarded in these four classifications:

Standard size papers of more than 50,000 circulation:

First, the Philadelphia Inquirer; second, The Christian Science Monitor; third, the New York Herald Tribune.

Standard size papers with from 10,000 to 50,000 circulation:

First, the Chattanooga Daily Times; second, the Glendale, Calif., News Press; third, the Passaic, N. J., Herald News.

First, the Iron Mountain, Mich., News; second, the Hornell, N. Y., Evening Tribune; third, the Titusville, Pa., Herald.

Tabloids:

First, the Chicago Daily Times; second, the Washington News; third, The New York Daily Mirror.

Three Men Killed In Plane Crash

Los Angeles, May 9 (AP)—Three men burned to death today in a plane collision over suburban Downey airport. Their ship went into a spin and crashed.

The victims were pilot Walter Quinton, Burbank; Marshall MacCarroll, Paramount newsree cameraman, and Marshall Coombs, Vultee aircraft photographer. Coombs, Vultee aircraft photographer.

Quinton's plane smashed into a single-seat pursuit craft piloted by Vance Breese, noted test pilot. Breese was able to bring his plane to a landing. First reports said Breese was hurt in the accident, but his injuries were not believed to be serious.

Morelia, Mexico, was the birthplace of Augustin de Iturbide, who served as emperor for a few months in 1822, and also of the man who led the rebellion against him, Jose Morelos y Pavon.

Prime Minister

Britons disturbed by the failure in Norway.

2,500,000 Men Called

Before Parliament recessed today until May 21 for the Whitsuntide holiday, a proclamation in the name of King George VI made an additional 2,500,000 men liable for armed service when summoned.

The proclamation gave Britain a potential fighting manhood of 4,500,000 between the ages of 19 and 37.

The government also prepared to burst any "Trojan Horse" within Britain. It presented a bill demanding the death penalty for grave cases of espionage and announced regulations to control aliens and propaganda.

Sir John Anderson, home secretary, told the House of Commons the measures were framed carefully to halt "mischievous activities" without penalizing mere expressions of opinion.

The day's events confirmed belief that 71-year-old Chamberlain means to try one more fall with destiny and Adolf Hitler. He promised the House another debate on conduct of the war two weeks hence "if events should make it desirable."

Plans Kept Secret

For the moment, however, he left unanswered whether he intends to continue with the present ministers or bow to labor's demands and discard Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer; Sir Samuel Hoare, air minister, and, possibly, War Secretary Oliver Stanley and Supply Minister Leslie Burgin.

Veteran observers, nevertheless, decided almost unanimously tonight that Chamberlain would drop them and begin reconstruction.

He could do that smoothly by resigning himself when he sees King George and then form a new government at the King's request, leaving them out.

This course was believed to have been urged on him by Conservative back-benchers with whom he conferred today just before a meeting of the war cabinet.

Filling their places would be a harder job.

The labor party has declared it will not allow its members to serve in a government over which Chamberlain holds the whip hand.

According to veteran political observers, there are two ways out of that dilemma.

First, Attlee, Greenwood and Morrison might bolt their party for the new cabinet by pleading that "England needs us" and "this is no time for partisan grudges."

There was a possibility that such a change of sides might influence Lloyd George and Liberal opposition leader Sir Archibald Sinclair to follow the Laborites' lead.

Secondly, the labor conference may draw up terms under which it would agree to participate in the Chamberlain government.

With the conference in mind, the labor opposition docilely accepted the twelve-day parliamentary adjournment for Whitsuntide, Britain's biggest spring "bank" holiday.

An independent, Clement Davies, amended the motion for adjournment to set May 14, next Tuesday, for reassembling but withdrew his proposal on assurances that the House would be recalled early in case of an emergency. The House of Lords already had adjourned to May 21.

99 out of 100--

99 out of every hundred tavern-keepers are, we feel, hard working, honest citizens. They, like their ancestors through the ages, contribute definitely to the comfort and enjoyment of their fellow men and women.

Like 99 out of 100 doctors . . . 99 out of 100 lawyers . . . 99 out of 100 merchants . . . in fact 99 out of 100 men and women in all lines . . . they deserve the protection of our laws.

The Brewing Industry in Maryland is calling your attention to excellent and sensible Maryland laws which protect both the public and the honest tavern-keepers from the occasional "black sheep" who finds his way into this and all other industries.

In the interest of honest and reliable taverns and tavern-keepers, report to this organization any tavern-keeper who is that 1 black sheep in 100.

Beer is a wholesome drink . . . it is entitled to be served in a wholesome manner in clean, decent taverns. 99 taverns out of 100 are good taverns . . . Help to get rid of any which are not.

Steel and Aircraft Stocks Stage Rally in Belief Allies Plan Drive

Many Leaders in Other Groups Are Ignored by Traders

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, May 9 (AP) — It was mainly a steel and aircraft stock market today with further war-buying in these categories lifting favorites 1 to more than 2 points at the best.

The idea seemed to have taken root in Wall Street that, as soon as the British cabinet controversy is ironed out, the Allies will start a real swing at the Germans and step up briskly their orders for military materials in the United States.

While stocks with a war flavor developed strength at the start, many leaders in other groups were given the cold shoulder by speculative contingents. Extreme gains were reduced in most cases at the close, and an assortment of issues was unable to shake off small minus signs.

Transfers moved up to 847,530 shares against 694,300 the day before.

Conspicuous on the upside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Vanadium, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Boeing, Curtiss-Wright, Lockheed, Wright Aeronautical, American Airlines, Weston Electric Instrument, Great Northern, U. S. Rubber common and preferred, Chrysler and International Harvester.

Up fractions to more than two in the curb were E. W. Bliss, Atlas Plywood, Heyden Chemical, Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero and Standard Steel Spring. Volume here was around 196,000 shares compared with 180,000 yesterday.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, May 9 (AP)—Grain prices made a futile attempt to rally today, but banked down in the face of favorable weather, heavy wheat marketings and increased country selling of corn.

Wheat was up ¾-⅞ cent at one stage but closed ⅛-½ lower than yesterday, May $1.05⅝-¾, July $1.04⅝-½. Scattered rains and recent of 1,473,000 bushels at 12 principal terminals, compared with 1,249,000 a week ago and 1,033,000 a year ago contributed to the weakness.

Oats closed ⅜-½ lower, rye ¼-½ higher, soy beans ½-⅝ lower and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Old Fashioned Gifts Are New In 1940 Gifts for Mother's Day

By The AP Feature Service

It's the return of old favorites that will provide something new in gifts for mother on Mother's Day this year. It isn't exactly a revival of lavender and lace, but there's the new interest in accessories merging with a renewed interest in feminine things that made grandmother a queen in calico.

Right in line with the hat designer's notion that summer chapeaux for 1940 should be sheer and fragile enough to require an ornamental anchor, the hatpin is back. One features a gay flower perched on a tiny spring.

The bar pin is back, too. Newest is black and white one decorated either with onyx and diamonds or with brilliants and enamel.

This pottery jar, filled with candy for Mother's Day, will find many uses later.

Another novelty is the china pin or clip of pastel flowers.

Other old ideas that are new are parasols to twirl in summer sun, a scarf for daytime, evening or bed jacket; perfumes or colognes that emphasize scents of the flowers and herbs found in old-fashioned gardens. It's easy to match cologne, bath powder and soap.

Here's a new way to give mother flowers—an old-fashioned bouquet in a wicker basket she can use in her garden.

If you'd like to give mother cosmetics it's best to be choosey. Some cosmetics are bright with color adopted from South America; others reflect television's influence toward darker makeup. But for most mothers it's wisest to choose her favorite powder, rouge or lipstick. There's a new compact with a stem like a watch. Twist the stem and it emits just the right amount of her favorite loose powder.

A rubber lined bag to hold mother's beauty preparations on her vacation trip.

Many families find it's a worth while idea to pool resources and buy one very special gift for mother. Other sons and daughters check with one another to be sure mother gets no duplicates in the old standbys—flowers, candy, lingerie, pocketbooks and gloves. A nice, but fairly expensive, gadget for mother's room is a tray that can be used for serving breakfast in bed and has a top that lifts to disclose a mirror and make-up set.

But whatever you give mother, do it in a special way. If she likes a flower on her desk, there's an unusual mirror and vase combination that will just turn the trick. But, if she has her heart set on something she should select herself, conceal the money you give her in a beautiful package.

Five Persons Are Injured in Gas Well Explosion

Sutton, W. Va., May 9 (AP)—Five persons were injured and several thousand dollars worth of equipment destroyed when a sixteen million cubic foot gas well being drilled on O'Brien creek, Clay county, exploded and caught fire just as it was drilled in yesterday.

Six steam boilers were taken to the scene tonight, to be used in "snuffing" out the fire tomorrow.

Those injured included: Romie Spencer, 31, of Villanova; Rance Tanner of Ruck Creek; Rody Ellis, 43, of Weston; Cromer Shamblin, Tanner of Duck Creek; Rody Ellis, 40, Orlondo, a driller.

Cause of the fire was undetermined, F. W. Festhof, Weston, assistant division superintendent of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Gas Company, for whom the well was being drilled, asserted.

COOL, COMFORTABLE Elastic Stockings give full support—yet look like fine hose
WOMEN welcome this revolutionary new Bauer & Black Elastic Stocking. Made of lighter Lastex yarns, this stocking gives you cool comfort, yet it is anatomically correct—gives you firmer support. And here's more good news—these Elastic Stockings can be worn unnoticed, either under silk hose, or without other hose. They can be laundered frequently, too, without losing their shape. Ask your doctor about Bauer & Black Elastic Stockings.

Funeral Notices

WEAKLEY — Margaret Helene, aged 22, wife of Isaac J. Weakley, Ridgeley, died Thursday, May 9, at Memorial Hospital. The body was removed to the home of her brother-in-law, Leonard Boone, 219 Humbird Street, where friends will be received, and where services will be held Saturday, at 2 p. m. Interment in Mt. Herman Cemetery. Arrangements by Wm. Knight Funeral Service. 5-10-1t-NT

In Memoriams

In loving memory of Mrs. Ada Beall, who died two years ago, May 9, 1938:

Cannot say and I will not say,
That she is dead, she is just away.
With one of her faring on as dear,
In the love of there as the love of here;
Think of her still as the same, I say;
She is not dead, she is just away.

Sadly missed by her son and sister,
CARL SMITH & MRS. ANNA CESSNA.

Card of Thanks

We wish to take this means and opportunity to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to the very many friends and relatives who were so very kind and helpful during the sickness and following the death of our beloved daughter and sister, Margaret L. Males, who died April 4. We also wish to thank all those who sent floral tributes and donated the loan of cars for the funeral and for the many other services rendered.
MOTHER & STEPFATHER.

THE DAILY STORY

WATERLOO

A Modern Napoleon Tries to Plumb the Secrets of a Woman's Heart and Gets the Usual Results

"Glory be to God!"

MARTIN ROWAN

Napoleon McHugh was a substantial block of a man. He was perhaps an inch taller than his namesake of Corsica. . He was once the schoolmaster of Ballycladdy, a good teacher, but somewhat erratic. Once he challenged the authority of a school manager. Les majeste was dangerous in Ballycladdy and Napoleon lost his job.

One day, standing on the cliffs of Ballycladdy, Napoleon McHugh spoke out loud. "There is no escape," quoth he. "Freedom must be bartered for a sinecure. I must perforce consult Patsy Don."

Patsy Dan was the matchmaker of Ballycladddy. His services were free.

"I desire to procure me a spouse, Patsy," said Napoleon, as he entered Patsy Dan's door. Formalities were unknown in Ballycladdy.

"How old are you?" asked Patsy Dan.

"I shall be 69 summers come Michaelmas," replied Napoleon.

"Is your health in reasonable condition, Napoleon?"

"Subject only to gout after gorging mylself on lucious viands and potent beverages, Patsy."

"Any particular ideals surviving from the days of your youth, Napoleon?"

"Once, about 50 years ago, there was a girl. Oh, but what the use! The barefoot pedestrian must bow in homage to the armored knight I crave security, Patsy."

"Have you thought of Peggy Finnegan of Hungry Hill, Napoleon?"

"But, Peggy has interred three husbands already, Patsy."

"There is no telling what she might do with a fourth, Napoleon. But she has land and cows. You'll need victuals and a roof over your head. She has both."

"Quite true, Patsy. It is a sad but nevertheless irrefutable fact that the ideal aspirations of things spiritual must be subjugated to mundane, corporal needs.

"Glory be to God!"

"Have you any money at all, Napoleon?"

"Not a blessed copper."

"There is only one thing that can be done then," said Patsy Dan, as he reached up on a shelf and took down a long cloth purse. "There's 40 half-sovereigns here, Napoleon, negan. If you find it hard to convince her let the purse fall out of your pocket like as if my mistake. I'll loan them to you for the day. Go up and make love to Peggy Finnegan. The grandest music a woman ever heard is the sound of gold. She'll never let the chance go by."

"Good morning, Peggy," said Napoleon McHugh as he entered Peggy Finnegan's.

There was no smile on Peggy's face. "What brings you to Hungry Mill, Mr. McHugh?"

"It is the balm of the morning and the resurrection of the dead love in my heart that compels me to wend my way to high altitudes on this auspicious day, Peggy," replied Napoleon.

"Is it out of your mind ye are?" asked Peggy, tartly.

"What do you imagine God created love for," Peggy, my sweet?" said Napoleon.

"Maybe He didn't have anything else to do that day," replied Peggy, sourly.

"Because He knew in His omnipotent wisdom that it was not good for a man to be alone, Margaret, my pet," said Napoleon.

"What are ye drivin' at, McHugh?" said Peggy, with asperity.

"Love's young dream, Margaret, my pulse," said Napoleon.

"Go home and wash your shirt, McHugh," said Peggy.

"Ah! Such sordid and mundane thought!" sighed McHugh, as he withdrew a polka-dotted handkerchief from his pocket to wipe away a tear. His purse fell out and gold coins rolled on the floor.

"Glory be to God!" said Peggy. "Where did ye get all the money?"

"There are £20 there and there is more where that came from, light of my life," replied Napoleon.

"Sit down and make yourself at home, Napoleon. I'll make a drop of tay. It must be tired ye are after yer long walk up the hill," said Peggy.

"God save all here," said a voice Peggy looked up.

"Glory be to God," said she. "If it isn't Ned O'Malley that went to America 35 years ago." She extended both hands in welcome. "I never forgot your face, Ned, and when did ye come home?"

"Yesterday, Peggy," replied Ned. "I never forgot your face, either. Do you remember that day 40 years ago when you fell into my arms while we were picking blackberries?"

"I was dreaming of that the night after my third husband died, a year ago," said Peggy.

"Strange that I dreamed the same thing the night my second wife died two years ago," said Ned O'Malley.

"Mental telepathy pure and simple," chirped in Napoleon McHugh.

"This is Mr. McHugh that used to be a schoolmaster here, Ned," introduced Peggy.

The men shook hands.

"Are ye goin' to stay in Ireland long, Ned?" asked Peggy.

"For good, Peg. I may have to make a brief trip to the States to sell my property and close my estate."

"I'll bet yer property is worth more than £20, Ned?" queried Peggy.

"Twenty pounds!" scoffed Ned. "Why, Peg, £20 would not last me a week for pocket money. I'm a wealthy man."

Peggy walked over and stood beside Ned. She looked into his eyes and sighed. "I'm glad ye came home, Ned," she said.

Ned looked into Peggy's eyes. He saw the light he had dreamed of for 40 years. He put his arm around her waist. She rested her head on his shoulder. Napoleon McHugh coughed. New O'Mally gave him a baleful look.

"Scram, fellah!" said Ned.

"Be goin' on home wit ye, McHugh," said Peggy.

Napoleon McHugh went out and slammed the door.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate..

Objection Is Made To Using Goats To Test Explosive

Baltimore, May 8 (AP)—An injunction application to prevent Lester P. Barlow, Baltimore inventor from testing a new explosive on live goats, has been filed in Circuit court by the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Barlow had announced that the test of his explosive, a liquid oxygen-carbon mixture called "gimite, would be conducted May 16 at the Aberdeen, Md., proving ground of the War Department.

Several weeks ago, when the plan was first made known, an Illinois pet magazine filed injunction proceedings in the same court, but the action was dismissed two days ago when the plaintiff failed to post the necessary bond.

Judge C. Gus Grason signed an order giving Barlow until May 22 to show cause why the injunction should not be granted, provided he is served with the court order on or before May 15.

Barlow contends that the concussion from his "super-bomb" will kill anything within a radius of 1,000 feet.

The S.P.C.A. petition said the demonstration "will result in the infliction by extreme and most severe cruelty of wounds, lacerations, suffering and agony upon any animal or animals that may be used x x x."

Eighty-nine Chamois, hitherto believed impervious to the disease, were found dead among about a thousand in the Faulhorn Mountain reservation alone. Swiss Federal veterinarians are trying to find a way to save the breed from this new scourge.

Clean-Up Drive Set for Week Of May 20

Jr. Association Sponsors Second Annual Campaign

Members of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce have been working for several weeks on the second annual Cumberland Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up campaign, which will be held the week of May 20 to May 25.

Committee members met last evening in the Association's offices. A number of sub-committees were selected to assist in the task of promoting greater public pride and interest in the city by encouraging individual beautification of homes, business places, industrial plants, institutions, streets, alleys, parks and other parts of the community.

Other Cities Set Example

About this time of the year, most aggressive cities sponsor some such campaign to serve as a reminder that a beautiful city is usually a healthier city, and the kind of community that attracts visitors and tourists, D. Clifford Goodfellow, chairman of the committee, explained.

In an effort to arouse greater public interest, the Junior Association plans an extensive publicity campaign, by means of the press, radio, banners, bill boards and displays. Radio talks and newspaper articles will offer constructive suggestions for enhancing the beauty of lawns, dwellings and their surroundings.

Much Can Be Done

Help hints will be available that should do much to encourage interest needed to make the city a more attractive place. Much can be done without huge expenditures of money to enhance the value and beauty of most properties, committee members believe. And it is for these reasons that the Junior Association is interested and has made this event an annual project.

Last year, the association featured the Clean Up, Paint Up, Fix Up campaign as its first project after being organized. There was considerable interest, and the young men plan to broaden the program a little each year until the whole community takes part.

Members of the committee who have been active in the campaign include, Chairman Goodfellow, Thomas E. Gilchrist, John Schaidt, Fred Z. Hetzel, F. Allan Weatherholt, and James A. Avirett.

Mother, 22, Dies, Baby Son Lives

Tragedy Precedes Mother's Day

If everything had gone well, the young couple would have celebrated Mother's Day with the birth of their first son.

But Fate ruled otherwise, and the young mother, only 22, made the supreme sacrifice. Her son lives.

Mrs. Margaret Weakley, wife of Isaac J. Weakley, died in childbirth early yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Also surviving, besides her husband and baby boy, are her mother, Mrs. John Reynolds, of Sandy Hook, Md.; four brothers, John W. Reynolds, of Cumberland, and James, Donald and Richard Reynolds, of Sandy Hook; and five sisters, Mrs. Francis Grimm, of Ridgeley; Mrs. Virginia Joy, of Brunswick, and Misses Josephine, Louise, and Reginia Reynolds, all of Sandy Hook.

The body was removed to the home of her brother-in-law, Leonard Boone, 219 Humbird street.

Driscoll Re-Elected By Republican Club

Members of the Sixth District Republican Club last night re-elected Fred B. Driscoll to the presidency at a meeting at Knights of Malta hall, Prospect Square.

Other officers re-elected were David Steel, treasurer, and J. Frederick Walton, secretary. New officers are George Williamson, first vice-president; Thomas L. Popp, second vice-president; and William R. Carscaden, third vice president.

The thirty-five members present unanimously endorsed the candidacies of former Governor Harry W. Nice for United States senator and Walter P. Johnson as Sixth representative.

Trucker Fined $100, Had No Insurance

A Cumberland trucker was sentenced to 110 days in the county jail yesterday on charges of failing to carry liability insurance and operating with improper license tags.

He was Raymond Lee Parker, of 11½ Fifth street, who was sent to jail in default of fines totaling $110. The insurance charge resulted in a fine of $100, the license charge, $10.

Parker, said to have been hauling fertilizer from Baltimore to Cumberland, was arrested in South Cumberland by State Trooper Carl G. Storm and tried before Trial Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr.

News Reporter Enjoys Grand College Opera

Grand opera officially comes to Frostburg tonight and a good many wives are going to make a good many husbands dust off their toppers, if they have any, and turn out for the momentous occasion.

Actually, grand opera arrived in Frostburg last night when Prof. Maurice Matteson herded a group of elementary school pupils into the gymnasium at Frostburg State Teacher's College to witness his dress rehearsal of Gounod's "Faust."

The soloists, villagers, soldiers and members of the orchestra were selected from the 220 students at the college.

"Daring Thing"

A News reporter caught up with Mr. Matteson between the first and second acts of the production. The perspiring Mr. Matteson immediately informed the reporter that putting on a grand opera was no picnic.

"It's a pretty daring thing to do," Mr. Matteson shouted after admitting that so far as he knew no other college around had ever tried it before.

Busy Evening

However, the director had little time at the moment to fool around with reporters. He was too busy stampeding the members of the cast out of the wrong places and into the right places.

Once everything was in readiness, Mr. Matteson left the members of his cast back stage and marched out front to quell the racket being made by the youthful members of the audience. Then, marching to the podium he keenly scrutinized the various members of his orchestra, lifted his arms aloft, and off they went.

When the curtain parted, the stage was found to be chuck full of people clad in colorful costumes and without any ado they plunged into the "Soldier's Chorus" which they rendered with gusto.

It was immediately noted that some members of the cast had not spared the horses in the matter of applying the grease paint. One, in particular, looked as if he had fallen bodily into a paint pot.

(However, it is to be remembered that last night's affair was merely the dress rehearsal and not the big moment. That's tonight).

Remarkable Death Scene

The act concludes with a henchman of the Devil (John Blackwell) running a sword through Valentine (William Klipp) who is the brother of Margarita (Mary Lou Dunn.)

Valentine's death last night was without a doubt one of the most gruesome things this reporter ever witnessed. He died slowly, inch by inch, in the true grand opera manner. He writhed, grimaced, clutched his breast and finally slogged to the floor.

For a moment it looked as if it was all over but he finally revived sufficiently to sing his swan song.

For a dying man Klipp gasped out his last song in an unusually vigorous manner, which is also true to the grand opera tradition. They always do. He will die again tonight.

Faust Well Played

Faust, an aged philosopher restored to youth by the Devil, will be played tonight by David Beck, a sophomore, who spent his early days in China where his father was a missionary.

Beck makes a jaunty figure in his gay duds and plumed hat. However his slim waistline does not even faintly resemble that of any grand opera singer this reporter ever saw, with the possible exception of Jan Kipura.

Beck's gestures are magnificent. His acting is by far the most grand operish thing in the production.

Blackwell A1 Devil

John Blackwell, of Cumberland, a freshman who is considering becoming an actor according to his teachers, plays the part of Mephistopheles, The Evil Spirit. He is a sinister looking soul and makes as fine a Devil as one could desire.

Margarita, a village maiden, is played by Mary Lou Dunn, of Frostburg, a sophomore, who has by far the best voice in the cast.

Klipp, also a sophomore, of Hagerstown, also sings well in the roll of Valentine until his realistic slow death scene at the end of the second act.

Cumberland Girl Sings

Siebel, a village boy devoted to Margarita, is played by a Cumberland girl, June Lee Shade, a sophomore, who sings nicely and looks like a nice Yale boy dolled up for masquerade.

Others in the cast are Harold Messmen, of Cumberland sophomore, who plays Wagner, a student, and Louyse Eldridge, a freshman, who portrays Dame Martha, the village gossip.

The student cast, all of whom are training to become school teachers, gives the opera in two hours, although the Metropolitan version usually takes three-and-a-half. Much of the opera has been abridged and adapted for tonight's show, although all the big moments still remain intact.

Reason for It

After the dress rehearsal, Mr. Matteson, who had been a dynamo all evening, took a few minutes off to tell why he conveived the idea of presenting Faust.

"I thought it would be a good experience for them," he said. "And I think they are enjoying it, too, but I'm not. I get too excited about the thing to enjoy it much.

At this point, Mrs. Matteson, who is the capable accompanist at the piano for the production, interrupted to explain that her husband really was enjoying it all immensely.

Great Treat Offered

At any event, people who see tonight's production are in for a treat. Although few of his cast have ever seen a grand opera, Mr. Matteson has ably put the idea across to them.

It's all most enjoyable, right up to the last moment, when the Devil makes off with poor Faust and Margarita swoons.

The members of the cast take the thing in stride, although one suspects now and then that they are quietly laughing up their sleeves here and there at such grandoise goings on. Most of them don't look like opera singers. Thank Goodness.

Once the Devil had snatched Faust last night and the curtain was rung down, the members of the orchestra proceeded to indulge in a bit of a jam session. Members of the Metropolitan would probably have been taken aback by such a finale but it really sounded mighty good.

As the News reporter left the gymnasium, a number of participants in the tragedy had gathered outside and were cutting loose with a little close harmony. The song was "Down by the Old Mill Stream."

It takes more than a grand opera to faze a modern college boy or girl.

Crystals Capture Savoy Ladies' Title

The Crystals, paced by Stegmaier's 461, defeated Savoy by 47 sticks at the Savoy this week to capture the Savoy Ladies' League title for the 1939-40 season. Savoy took the second and third games but was unable to overcome the 114-pin margin gained by the Crystals in the opener.

Sluss pegged the high count in an earlier second half rolloff engagement as the Crystals downed the Majestics to earn the right to oppose Savoy. The Crystals bagged their 80-pin margin in the third game after reducing the Majestics' early lead in the second. The summary:

Fire Marshal State's Need

Gontrum Urges Funds Be Appropriated

Failure of the Maryland legislature to provide funds for the salary of a state fire marshal drew the fire of State Insurance Commissioner John B. Gontrum here last night.

In an address before the Allegany county branch of the National Life Underwriters Association, Gontrum pointed out that the work of his office is divided into two main functions—supervision of the insurance business in Maryland and prevention of fires as well as investigation of arson cases.

After pointing out the first division is primarily the work of the state insurance commissioner and that the law provides for the appointment of a deputy insurance commissioner to act as state fire marshal, Gontrum said:

"Owing to the failure of the legislature to allow funds for the payment of a state fire marshal, I have found that it was necessary that I assume the functions of a fire marshal until such time as the legislature recognizes the importance of that office and makes provision for the payment of a full-time fire marshal."

Gontrum took occasion to praise John Meyers, of Cumberland, one of the deputy fire marshals of his office, as "an excellent man in every way."

Gontrum turned next to the supervision of insurance companies and praised the business as essential to security and happiness.

One point he emphasized in his discussion was that the state insurance department is always ready to give advice and counsel to policyholders without charge.

Another speaker at the meeting, held at Central YMCA, was Capt. Maynard C. Nicholl, of Baltimore, general agent for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company.

President A. V. Huey presided and introduced Gontrum. L. Leslie Helmer introduced Nicholl.

Police Seize Unsafe Bikes

Have Cellar Full In Safety Drive

A lot of Cumberland youths are walking these days instead of riding bicycles.

That's the result of the annual spring drive against unsafe bicycling launched this week by the police.

Nearly a score of bicycles are stored in the basement of police headquarters — temporarily confiscated for violations of the city safety regulations.

The cellar is almost full of them, and police last night issued an appeal to the bicyclists to observe the regulations. They don't want the bicycles, but will keep grabbing them unless the cyclists behave.

The riders of the now riderless bikes are scheduled to be given hearings in Police court tomorrow, and sentences may range from confiscation of the "wheels" for a week —or six months.

Offenses listed on the docket include riding double, no license or failing to carry licenses, "fancy" riding, riding up one-way streets, ignoring traffic lights, allowing unlicenced persons to ride, and failure to carry bells or lights.

The drive was spurred by the serious injury of an eleven-year-old boy when the bicycle he was riding ran into a car on Greene street Sunday. Police pointed out that boy was riding a bicycle he had borrowed from a girl.

And the girl is one of the offenders elated to get a hearing tomorrow. She is charged with lending her bike to an unlicensed person.

Leo Leasure with 212-499 paced the Saints while Levin was high for Embassy with 207-500. The Diamonds won three from Martin's Market and Club scored over the Cumberland Outdoor Club in forfeit contests. Neither the Marketeers or Outdoor Club could get a full team together.

The Diamonds, who copped both halves of the race, rolled for averages with P. Smith checking in 193-533. Club also scattered the sticks although it had no opposition with "Bud" Edenhart spilling 207-562 and Francis Twigg 200-521. The Diamonds rolled on their home alleys and the Club on the Savoy lanes. Schoolboy Patrolmen, 275 Strong, To Invade Washington Tomorrow

A trainload of schoolboy patrolmen, 275 strong and led by the Fort Hill band, will descend on Washington tomorrow to parade and see the sights during their ninth annual convention.

The local contingent, sponsored by the Western Maryland Motor Club, will leave here tomorrow at 5 a. m. aboard a chartered B&O train.

Since schoolboy patrolmen travel, like an army, on their stomachs, they will be supplied at the outset with a lunch kit containing sweet rolls, cup cakes and cookies, and one banana.

The patrolmen will parade in blue and white uniforms and white caps, and each will carry an 18-inch American flag. After they march, they will lunch at Thompson's restaurant. Then they will visit the public buildings and stop at Chinatown for some souvenirs, arriving back at Thompsons, of course, in time for supper.

Then they will catch the train for home, arriving here about 9 p. m.

Fifty to seventy-five parents and sixty members of the Fort Hill band will swell the ranks of the 275 patrolmen.

F. H. Rockwell, president-manager of the auto club, will be generalissimo. Assisting him will be the club directors, K. A. Wolfe, J. Walter Byer, J. L. Towler, Daniel D'Amicol, M. M. Patterson, G. Gale Townsend, Alvin B. Storey, Samuel Wolford, and Ward Hauger.

Settlement Seen In Stewart Case

Circuit Court Hearing Halted

An out-of-court settlement is scheduled to close the injunction suit filed last week by A. Charles Stewart, it was indicated yesterday as a hearing in the case was halted in Circuit court.

Stewart, Frostburg business man and former president of the board of county commissioners, had asked an injunction to prevent Arthur Mullooly and Blair V. Welsh from using or damaging a road leading to Stewart-leased mines near Mt. Savage.

The road is on property owned by Mullooly, but Stewart admittedly has a right to use it in his mining business.

Though Attorneys William A. Gunter and David W. Sloan, Stewart claimed that he had built and maintained the road for the use of his coal trucks and that heavy tractors and trucks used by Welsh in hauling logs from a timber operation had badly damaged the road.

The defendants, represented by Attorney Clarence Lippel, denied having damaged the road and also contested the right of Stewart to bar them from using it, although admitting his right to use it.

Several engineers were on hand to testify in the case, but the hearing was halted before the plaintiff's case had been completed, and an agreement between the parties appeared likely without further court proceedings.

'Outward Bound' Is Town Hallers' Grand Finale

Will Be Presented Monday Night To Climax Season

The Town Hall Players, Cumberland's Little Theatre Group, climax the current season with presentation of Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound" Monday night at St. Peter and Paul hall on Fayette street.

Director Carl A. Low Jr. decided that after reading many plays in an effort to obtain the right vehicle for a closing show, he found "Outward Bound" to be the one most suited. In fact, he goes on to say that it will probably be the best show the Town Hall Players have given to date.

The story concerns the passengers on a ship that is outward bound, but exactly where no one knows. It is a ship with but one class, and rich and poor alike, and with the captain or crew. The only attendant is the steward Scrubby, who tries to comfort and advise the individuals of this oddly assorted group, when they find out they are sailing for both Heaven and Hell.

The company is amusingly mixed, including ne'er-do-well, an irritable business man, a cockney charwoman, etc.

And the reactions are many and varied when they all find out they are dead people approaching the Supreme Examiner. As can be imagined, these contrasting reactions combine to make an enthralling and unusual drama.

The cast includes Low, J. Hall Smith, Jack Moore, Winnie Moore, Lois May Clerihue, Willie Cooper, Bill Kight, Bob Rosamond, and Virginia Keffer.

The production is being staged by Low, with Jimmy Shaw and Sam Cramer as technical crew.

Gunter, Mrs. Legge Honored at Dinner

Certificates of appreciation for their work in putting over the Community Chest Drive were presented last night to William A. Gunter and Mrs. George Legge at a dinner-meeting of workers at the Central Y. M. C. A.

The presentations were made by H. W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce and president of the Chest, with both Mr. Gunter and Mrs. Legge giving short talks.

While last night's dinner meeting was called principally for the purpose of tossing well-deserved bouquets to the wheel horses of the drive, most of the people present seemed more concerned with planning for next year's campaign.

Suggestions for improving next yearly drive were presented and will be given consideration by Chest officials.

Death Car Driver Has Broken Back

Lewis E. Fallon, 22, of McCoole, suffered a broken back in the automobile accident in which Charles Raymond Robinson, also of McCoole, was killed Wednesday afternoon.

This was revealed yesterday by x-rays at Reeves clinic in Westernport. Only one vertebra was fractured, however, which means that young Fallon probably will not be crippled. He will have to spend some time in a cast, however.

Fallon was driving his 1929 Ford roadster from Westernport to McCoole when it overturned and threw both men out. Robinson died shortly afterwards of a fractured skull.

It was only a year ago that Robinson was riding in a car in which Frank Chucci, of Burke Hill was fatally injured. In this accident, which happened on Pattersons creek six miles from Keyser, Robinson was thrown sixty feet. He suffered a slight skull fracture then, and was in Potomac Valley hospital for two weeks.

Young Children Should Not Get Up too Early

Parents Should Have Regular Hour for Baby To Arise

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

As the days grow longer babies and young children want to arise earlier. But it is not well for babies and young children to get up with the birds. Consider the sleep they lose when they do and sleep their mothers also lose.

Regardless of the season, many babies and young children don't sleep nearly long enough in the morning. Some young children, especially on the farm, get up when their parents do—at four or five or six—and stay up till their parents go to bed. Such need not happen. It won't if the parents make a sensible plan and carry this plan through.

You say it can't be done, except with a few children? Yes, it can. It was done with our children and it was done with many other children I have studied. The cost in pain to the parent and child to accomplish it is about nothing. The gain to both parent and child in comfort, health and general welfare is ten thousand-fold, perhaps.

Decide on a desirable hour for the tot to get up in the morning. Set the alarm clock for that time. When the clock rings go for the child, or if he is old enough let him get up and dress alone. If he awakens earlier let that be his privilege, but he must not stand in the crib or get out of his cot till the designated time. If he does, give him pain without exception—a good smacking, preferably. Don't tell him to go back to sleep, merely that he must not get up. If you hold yourself literally to this program, he will find the world so drab and unattractive that he will, after a few mornings, just fall back to sleep. But if you are inconsistent, don't hold yourself rigidly to the clock, or if in any way you create the slightest doubt in his mind about the program, he will hold out indefinitely—beg, whine, cry and create all sorts of disturbances.

Then don't expect him to sleep later on Sunday or the Fourth of July than any other day. He should rise at exactly the same hour the year around. Continue with this program indefinitely after the child enters school. As he nears adolescence, even earlier, he may want to sleep longer than his school program will allow.

Some parents, thinking only of their own comfort and welfare, will allow the child to get up and play quietly with his toys whenever he happens to awaken. It's their child, of course, but if they are considering his health and welfare, they probably will prefer to train him to sleep until a regular reasonable hour in the morning. They should remember that it is not only the hour when a child goes to bed that determines how much he sleeps, but also the time when he awakens in the morning. They should realize, moreover, that the child who chooses least sleep is the very child who needs most of it, being so excitable and high-strung.

You may have a chart of desirable hours of sleep for children at various ages by writing me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.
